PREFACE

THE purpose of this little book is twofold:—
First, to make generally accessible the text of the brief COMPUTUS MANUALIS, which was printed at Oxford by Charles Kyrfoth, in February, 1519–20, as a textbook for Arts Students in the sixteenth century, but which has for many generations survived only in a single copy preserved at the University Library, Cambridge.

Secondly, to prefix to the Computus an annotated text of the principal manuscripts of the ANCIENT KALENDAR of the UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, as it is found in the old Proctors' Books, &c., written about the year 1400, with some account of its earlier and later developments.

The text of the Computus has been hitherto virtually unknown in modern times; but the Kalendar of 1400 has been, for the last five-and-thirty years or more, available in the first volume of Mr. Anstey's invaluable Munimenta Academica, issued under the direction of the Master of the Rolls in 1868. The kalendar which is there printed is a compilation from the Chancellor's and the two Proctors' Books, compared with the directions given in other archives.

A wish, however, has been expressed by certain influential members of the Council of the OXFORD HISTORICAL SOCIETY, to the effect that the Chancellor's (or Commissary's) and two Proctors' Kalendars should each be printed separately, with the places of the numerous obliterated passages marked, and the later insertions indicated typographically as far as it might be possible.

Mr. Madan, Mr. Stainer, and the present editor have done their best to recover some of the writing of the blackened passages in the three books, wherever the case was not quite hopeless; but they have met only with partial success. Some of the entries are absolutely illegible: in other instances while we were examining the manuscripts an unusually bright gleam of sunlight on the page would raise hopes which presently an unkind cloud would too speedily dispel.

The task of deciphering the blackened passages has proved too hard for absolute success at present. Some few passages have been recovered. For the rest, our readers must be content to wait until applied chemistry, perhaps at no far distant date, shall enable palaeography to recover what the misapplied chemicals of a long-past generation have hitherto obscured.

As Cambridge has preserved the unique surviving copy of the printed Computus Manualis ad usum Oxonieñ, so likewise has it possession of the Oxford Kalendar in what is perhaps its earliest extant form.

In the second volume of his Catalogue of Western Manuscripts at Trinity College, Cambridge, Dr. M. R. James, in 1901, drew attention to an early Fourteenth-Century Kalendar (perhaps from Caudebec in Normandy), which, in the same century, by means of interlineations and additions, was adapted for use as an OXFORD KALENDAR OF THE FOURTEENTH CENTURY. It represents the University Almanac as it stood about the year 1337.

We print this old Oxford Kalendar from the Trinity College, Cambridge, MS. R. 14. 29¹ at the end of this preface, so as immediately to precede the body of our work.

¹ M. R. James, Catalogue of Western MSS. at Trin. Coll., Cam., ii. pp. 312-13. (In our collations on pp. 68-79, cf. 20, 21, we refer to this MS. R. 14.29, by the letter 'T.')

It would, perhaps, have been more modest if an alumnus of the sister university had not volunteered, or even consented, to edit and to comment upon a small but somewhat obscure portion of the OXFORD ACADEMICAL ARCHIVES.

I could not, however, help remembering that in the early days of the OXFORD HISTORICAL SOCIETY when I was honoured with a place in its counsels, I had made an offer to undertake some work in connexion with its publications. 'Conscience,' which makes 'cowards' of some, has urged me on to a sort of spurious bravery; and my bold offer was courteously—and, as I now fear, too courteously—accepted.

But without the help and encouragement, freely given by the Rev. Dr. J. R. Magrath, Provost of Queen's College, by Dr. C. Lancelot Shadwell, sometime Fellow of Oriel, and by Mr. Falconer Madan, Fellow of Brasenose and Sub-librarian of the Bodleian Library, the result would have been even more unworthy of the Society and of the University than it is.

I have throughout enjoyed the further advantage of counsel and assistance from Mr. C. L. Stainer of Christ Church. That he has kindly saved me many an additional journey, my thanks to him are personally due; and our readers are indebted to him for the care which he has given to the book while it was in the course of printing, and especially to the reproduction of the Chancellor's and Proctors' Kalendars.

I have elsewhere recorded my obligation to the Rev. Dr. Hastings Rashdall of New College, and to Dr. Edwin C. Clark, F.S.A., Regius Professor of Civil Law at Cambridge, for notes upon the curious frontispiece to the Oxford Computus Manualis of 1519-20; as also my debt of gratitude to Miss A. F. Parker, Miss Jessica Lewis, and Mr. Alfred Rogers, for work done in Oxford, in London, and at Cambridge respectively: but I must not let slip this opportunity without expressing my thanks to the Rev. T. Vere Bayne, Keeper of the Archives, and to Mr. Hart, the Controller of the University Press, as well as to those who have been engaged in printing, reading, and revising the pages of the following work.

To the Rev. Henry Anstey's Munimenta Academica I am (as writers on this subject cannot fail to be) very considerably indebted, as also to Mgr. H. Denifle, O. P., and to M. Chatelain, Librarian at the Sorbonne, for their work upon the Archives of the Mother University of Paris. M. Léopold Delisle, Mr. F. Bickley, Assistant Keeper of the British Museum MSS., Mr. Francis Jenkinson, the Rev. Hugh F. Stewart, Chaplain at Trinity College, Cambridge, Dr. Montague Rhodes James (principally through his books), Mr. James Bass Mullinger, and Mr. Henry Littlehales have also rendered us valuable assistance. Other librarians at Cambridge, Mr. C. W. Moule at Corpus Christi College, Dr. Reid and Dr. Venn at Gonville and Caius, Dr. Sinker, the Librarian at Trinity, and, not least, Mr. William White, the Sub-librarian of forty-eight years' standing, whose activity as an octogenarian is the envy of many of his juniors, have all been most kind in ministering to my researches.

ANCIENT KALENDAR AND COMPOTUS MANUALIS.

ERRATA

(Frontispiece and p. 110.)

Mr. Percy Manning has pointed out to me that the object depicted beneath the penknife in the frontispiece reproduced from the Compotus Manualis printed at Oxford in 1519-20, which I supposed (p. 110) to be a tawse or knout, is more likely to have been intended to represent an inkhorn attached by though to a pen-case, for slinging at the girdle.

Such an ink-holder and pen-case is represented (1) in stone on a shield upon the tomb of James Souch, 1503, at Christ Church, in the Cathedral; (2) on a brass (whence the name is lost) of the same period, at New College; (3) on a brass which commemorates Thomas Heron, 1517, at Little Ilford, Essex. See also Haines, Monumental Brasses, i. p. lxxxv. A similar object appears on the desk beside a student in the woodcut-title to the Equivoca of psuedo-Garlandia, 1505:—'Multorum vocabulorum equivocorum interpretatio Magistri Johannis de Garlandia.'

AN OXFORD KALENDAR, A.D. 1337

-  From an early fourteenth-century Kalendar of some French Use (Trin. Coll., Camb., MS. R. 14.29), in which Oxford Notes have been inserted later in the fourteenth century. The writing of the Oxford insertions may be somewhat later than 1337¹; but it represents the kalendar of Oxford as it must have stood from 1337 to 1344, since it does not contain the obits of Neel, Vaughan, &c., which (cir. 1340—1403) appear in the Archives now at Oxford.
- ¹ It is perhaps only a coincidence that in the year 1337, to which (pp. 21-3) we assigned the Oxford insertions in the Trinity Coll. MS. upon independent grounds, Whitsmday fell upon June 8, the day on which it is somewhat arbitrarily placed in this kalendar, on p. xix. However, the date there given for Easter Day (April 2) at p. xvii belongs to some such year as had never happened to occur since the Norman Conquest; and Ascension Day did not fall upon May 30 (p. xviii) until 1591!

NOTES

ON THE HORAE MALAE IN DIEBUS AEGRIS, AND OTHER MEMORANDA IN THE FOREGOING EARLY KALENDAR (Trin. Coll. Cant. R. 14. 29).

WE have elsewhere (pp. 190-1) spoken of the 'Egyptian days,' dies aegri, or dies mali (or malae, as on p. xxi), which are specified in the lines found at the head of each month (as on pp. 46-57, 68-79, 198-214) in several of the kalendars printed in this book, and more briefly indicated in the two lines 'Au-gurio di-ces' (or 'de-cies') i.e. p. 173, lines 235-6. They are entered also, but on the specific days themselves, in the fourteenth-century kalendar here prefixed (pp. xiv-xxv).

It does not appear to have been found that the whole of each of these days (somehow connected with the—not Ten, but Four and Twenty—Plagues of Egypt) was unlucky; or at all events it was generally agreed that some hour in each of the several days (the hour, in fact, when the plague was supposed to have been sent in Egypt) was more fatal than the rest. Durandus promised some observations on the unlucky hours 'in fine operis,' but I do not find that he redeemed his promise in the Rationale 1.

(I.) A memoria technica, indicating the unlucky hours in each Egyptian or evil day, is given in the Oxford Computus, on p. 173 below, lines 238-9; viz.:—

'Men-falus, il-lud, (h)a bet, ar-matus, fi-lia, fi-dus.
Mi-mus, a-git, ce-det (al. 'se-det'), e-lizos, ze-phorus, au-fert.'

The letters beginning the first and second syllable in each word of the twelve words in this couplet, which letters we have printed in italics, have a numerical value, but the commentators differ to some extent in their interpretation, and elicit from it somewhat different lists of the unlucky hour in each of the twenty-four ill days of the year, two in each month, one towards the beginning, and the other reckoned from the end, 'retrograde.'

(II.) Pynson's Almanach Ephemeris, 1506-7, as we state on p. 191, distinctly says that we are not to drop the letter 'h,' in reckoning the hours, in the lines 'menfalus,' &c., though we are (as all agree) to discard it in finding the dies aggri by the help of the lines 'Augurio decies,' &c.

His commentary on 'Menfalus,' &c. is this:—'In istis duobus versibus sunt xii dictiones, mensibus deseruientes, prima, primo, secunda, secundo, &c. Unde per primam litteram prime syllabe cuiuslibet dictionis habemus in qua hora Deus misit plagam super Egiptiacos a capite mensis. Et per primam secunde syllabe habeamus in qua hora Deus misit plagam super Egiptiacos in fine mensis. Verbi gratia, Men-falus est prima dictio que deseruit ianuario. accipiamus .m. que computando est duodecima littera in alphabeto. Ergo in xii. hora misit Deus plagam in Egiptiacos in prima die 1 Egyptiaco ianuarii. Similiter in prima littera secunde syllabe eiusdem dictionis, que est f. et est sexta in alphabeto. Ergo in .vi. [hora] misit Deus plagam super Egiptiacos in septima 2 die ianuarii in fine computando retrograde. ita quod .h. pro littera computatur. Et sic de aliis. Quod autem sint decem plage principales patet per hos versus, Prima, rubens unda [ut infra, p. 191]. Ordo est, 'Menfalus' est pro primo mense, scilicet pro ianuario, et sic de aliis.' (Almanach Ephemerides, 1506-7, lf. 33.)

XXVIII NOTES ON THE FRENCH KALENDAR (T.)

Thus according to Pynson's interpretation the unlucky days and hours are on:

| hor | ae malae. | horae malae. |
| Jan. 1st | . xij. | July 13th xij. |

(III.) But apart from the memoria technica ('Menfalus illud habet,' &c.) we have the horae malae indicated in other ways. Thus at the foot of the pages in the kalendar of the earliest printed Missale Romanum, Milan, 1474 (H. Bradshaw Society's reprint, 1899), we find this series of twelve lines (which I have partially emended) relating to the 'evil hours' of the several months:—

'Prima parit bellum: sed quinta dat hora flagellum. Nullus et octaue uel dene dixerit aue.

Prima nocet multum †: nullum dabit altera cultum 5.

Prima petit tellis † quem nona requirit Aprilis.

Sexta minus sordet, cum uulnera dena remordet.

Ledit quinta cutem: nullam dat quarta salutem.

Est lupus vndena: pariter quoque nona leena.

Cuspide prima ferit, quam septima perdere querit.

Tertia Septembris et quarta dabunt mala membris.

Quinta dat Octubris † que nona uenena colubris.

Est octaua canis: fore quarta uidetur inanis.

Prima parit luctum: nullum dat septima fructum.'

³ The 7th from the end. See preceding note.

¹ This is indicated by such lines as give the dies Egyptiacos: 'Prima dies mensis et septima truncat ut ensis,' 'Iani, Prima dies et septima fine timetur' (i.e. the 7th from the end of the month, or in other words January the 25th. In the memoria technica likewise 'Au-gurio' indicates the 1st and the 7th by the letters A and g.

See above, p. xvii (Mar. 14).

The numbers thus indicated are 1, 5; 8, 10; 1, 2; 1, 9; 6, 10; 5, 4; 11, 9; 1, 7; 3, 4; 5, 9; 1, 7. Comparing these with the columns derived from Pynson's 'Almanach Ephemerides,' we find one portion of five consecutive numerals—August (both hours), September (both hours), and October (the former one), identical in the two. As to the dies aegri themselves, the same days are noted in the (corrected) verses of Missale Rom. 1474, at the head of the page, as in the 'Augurio decies' and the 'Prima dies mensis,' with the exception only of December. I will give as a specimen the lines for January, February, November and December from the Roman Missal:—

'Prima dies Iani timor est et septima vani.
Alterius mensis post quartum tertius ensis (&c.).
Quinta Nouembris obest: nulli lux tertia prodest.
Hoc dat bissena decimi quod septima dena.'

Here Missale Rom. (1474) gives Dec. 12 and 17, in place of the 1st and 7th. We can only suppose that different versifiers found different days in December unlucky, and that experience taught them that the hours specified in 'Menfalus,' &c., were not so baleful as certain others in their own experience.

(IV.) But when we turn back to the kalendar which we have printed on pp. xiv-xxv, from the Trinity College Cambridge MS. R. 14. 29, we find that the days, the dies aegri, are noted in the almanac itself (i. e. as the days themselves occur in the course of each monthly page), in the original hand as the book was first written, probably in France¹. But the hours, the horae malae, have been subsequently added in the fourteenth century, whether at Oxford or not I cannot say. There is, moreover, at the top of each page one line of the corresponding series relating to the Egyptian days, which begins:—

'Iani prima dies et septima fine timentur,'

And in three other months this kalendar gives lines different from the series 'Prima dies mensis' with which it is mainly in agreement.

'Marcius prima necat: cuius de cuspide quarta est.'

'Tercius in Maio lupus est, et septimus anguis.'

'Dat duodena cohors septemque decemque Decembris,' which is found in the works ascribed to the Venerable Bede (Opera, i. 467. See Hampson, Medii Aevi Kalendarium, ii. 108). These, however, give the same ill days as those printed in double columns on p. xxviii. But where the lines are applied there is a slight discrepancy. On p. xvii the two April Egyptian days—apparently of set purpose, as there is a sign of alteration—are each placed one day later than by other authorities. But it is principally with the unlucky hours that we are here concerned, as they may have been inserted after the book fell into an Englishman's (perhaps Oxonian's) hands, although the writing is coarser than that in which the academical entries are written. The latter I have ascribed to 1337; the entries of dies malae are entered in a scribble, which reminds me of some writing as early as 1280 in a Lincoln Chapter ancient register, but may, in the case before us, be a good deal later.

Although Caudebec on the Seine is incidentally mentioned in a memorandum—see p. xix at June 5th, I doubt if the book originally related to the arch-diocese of Rouen. Some entries point to Tours. But then there is no mention of St. Gatien (or Gratianus), the patron of that see. We must seek for a St. Sauveur's church-See p. xxi (19 Aug.). Cf. p. xxxii.

The series of horae malae, printed on pp. xiv-xxv above, runs thus:

Jan. xj.+ vj.; Feb. viij.+ xv.; Mar. j. ij.; Apr. j. xj.+; May vj. x.+; June, ij. iiij.; July, xj.+ xj.; Aug. j. vij.; Sept. xvij. iiij.; Oct. viij.* ix.; Nov. iij. v.; Dec. ij. vj.

I have marked with an asterisk or an obelus those cases where there is a discrepancy between the Trinity College MS. R. 14. 29 (or ' T.') and the ' Menfalus' rnle as interpreted in Pynson's Almanach Ephemerides. This leaves ten cases out of twenty-four where the two authorities agree: a sufficient proportion to make us think that they started from the same original. When we go further, and consider the six cases which I have obelized, we find that in each of them the hour in Pynson's book is one unit in advance of the Trinity College MS., and that all these cases are concerned with numerals higher than 8. I should account for this simply by supposing that the annotator of T. believed that the letter 'h' was to be discarded in the interpretation of 'Menfalus,' while Pynson's commentator decided otherwise. On this supposition, we have a virtual agreement with the letter of the 'Menfalus' rule in sixteen cases out of twenty-four. Further, the word 'cedet' which serves for horae malae in the month of September (see p. 173, line 239 of Computus) and yields the numerals iij. iiij. is printed 'se-det,' by Pynson, which would give (instead of iij.) xviij. (or xvij. if we reject 'h' in our series). And xvij. (or 5 p.m.) is the hour stated by T., so that we get seventeen virtual coincidences between T. and Pynson's book. The cases of October and November, with the strange words 'e-lizos,' or 'el-izos' (=v. xj., or omitting 'h,' v. x.; or else v. x., al. v. ix.) and 'ze-phirus' (=xxiij. xv.; or xxij. xiiij.) are among the perplexing discrepancies. The hours as given in T. would require two words with their first syllables beginning i- k- (or h- i-) and c- e-, respectively.

(V.) One or two remarks in conclusion may be made respecting the Trinity College MS. Kalendar.

At Feb. 16 there is inserted the line:-

'Nullus et octaue uel dene dixerit aue.'

The reader will here recognize the second of the lines about the horae malae, printed from the Roman Missal of 1474, on p. xxviii above. At the foot of the same month (p. xv) are four lines beginning 'Si paribus uel disparibus.' These I suppose are a prognostication of ordeal, to be elicited from the even or uneven number of letters contained in the names of two combatants, or 'pugnantes,' the 'aggrediens,' and the 'defensor.'

Against the 14th day of March (p. xvi) we find :-

' Prima nocet vultum: nulli dabit altera cultum' (see p. xxviii, n.), which, in agreement with other authorities, again gives j. and ij. as the horge malae for March. The lines at the foot 'quatuo(r) et peca' (? deca) give a series of numbers, which I can neither decipher satisfactorily nor explain.

On May 30 (littera c.), with F for the Sunday letter of the year, is given as a date for Ascension Day. On July 7 (p. xx) the name of St. Thomas of Canterbury has been erased, doubtless after the book had been brought into England, and possibly not until the year 1538. At the foot of the same month, but with reference to July 2, Old Style, are the prognosticating lines which we may translate—

'On Saint Processus and Martinian's, rain Presageth deluges and rotting grain.' It is noticeable that St. Swithin had a commemoration on that day, as well as his feast on the 15th. But the popular story about the forty days' rain falling when his Translation was at first attempted, cannot, so far as I know, be traced back beyond one or two centuries. It is a curious fact, that the change to New Style made the 15th equivalent to the 2nd recently: so the observation of a long spell of rainy weather, or else a continuance of fine days, at that time of year, may be traced further back than the connexion with St. Swithin's Translation.

In France there are two proverbs which make July 1st, and June 8th, rule the weather:-

'Quand il pleut le St-Calès, Il pleut quarante jours après,'

And

'Quand il pleut pour St-Médard, Il pleut quarante jours plus tard.'

On August 6 (p. xxi) the feast of the Transfiguration was introduced in 1457. It is noticeable that nothing is said in MS. T. about the Feast of the 'Most Sweet and Holy Name of Jesus,' which was introduced about the same period, perhaps a few years later in the fifteenth century. Besides its usual monthly allowance of bad days and hours, August has here, on the 12th, a 'dies mala inter x. et xj. horas.'

At the foot of the month of October (p. xxiii) is what appears to be a riddle :--

'Res est in Nemore nigro uestita colore. Si capud abstuleris, res erit alba nimis.'

The answer may be 'cor-nix.

Among 'redils' in Arundel MS. 507, is, 'cor-nix est alba, si cor tollatur ab illa.' Horstman, E. E. Writers, i, 427.

At the end of November :-

'Andree festo vicinior ordine quouis Aduentum Domini prima colit feria.'

This answers to the rule in the Book of Common Prayer:— 'Advent Sunday is always the nearest Sunday to the Feast of St. Andrew whether before or after.'

At the end of December (p. xxv) there are three lines :-

'Quere nouam lunam post Ia, Fe. Mar. A. Maij nonas.'
'Quinque bis; inde dyas; bis septem; bis deca; thetras.
Si cadat in lucem Domini, suppone sequentem.'

This rule (which we find also on p. 46, below) means, as the Provost of Queen's has explained to me, that by looking out for the new moons next after Jan. 5, Feb. 5, March 7, August 5, and May 7, respectively, and adding in the successive cases the number of days indicated, viz.:— $5 \times 2 = 10$; 2; $2 \times 7 = 14$; $2 \times 10 = 20$; and 4, you will arrive at (1) the eve of Septuagesima (when 'Alleluia' is last heard before Easter), (2) the First Sunday in Lent, (3) Easter Day, (4) Whitsunday, and (5) Rogation Sunday. If, however, your terminus a quo (the New Moon) itself happens to fall on a Sunday, then 'suppone sequentem,' i.e. reckon from its morrow instead, or else the rule will mislead you.

Most of the saints' names included in the Trinity College Cambridge MS. of the fourteenth-century French kalendar, adapted subsequently for Oxford use, will be found in Paris, Oxford, and Cambridge kalendars indexed below, on pp. 257-64, in Index no. I. For the benefit of such of our readers as may be interested in kalendars generally we print (on pp. 279-80) a supplementary index (no. VI) of the other saints, &c., which are found in T. but are not included in the Academical Kalendars.

XXXII NOTES ON THE FRENCH KALENDAR (T.)

Some French ecclesiologist will, no doubt, be able to decide upon the provenance of our Kalendar. Besides a few feasts of universal note marked by the use of red ink, the following are in like manner distinguished: -S. Guillermus (26 Jan.), Peter M., O.S.D., 1252 (29 Apr.), Brieuc Ep. C. (1 May), Antony, C. (6 June), Gervais and Protais, MM. (19 June; see also, 13 Dec.), Guillelmus, Ep. C. (St. Brieuc, A.D. 1237, July 29), ad Remy, Géminien and Vaast, or Vedast (1 Oct.). Other noticeable days are the 'Natale' (?accession day) of a certain Bishop Paul on the 10th of October¹, and the 'Dedicatio ecclesie sancti Salvatoris' on the 10th of August. This last is not the basilica of the Lateran in Rome, which appears in some kalendars, for that was upon Nov. 9th. A few cathedral churches or dioceses bear the title of St-Sauveur for patronal or dedicational honour, viz. Vabres (near Clermont), where was a bishopric from 1317 to 1796, Sarlat (with S. Sardos), a see 1318-1801, Aix en Provence (with the Transfiguration). There is a church of St. Saviour at Dinan, also at Caen (dio. Bayeux). And in De Mas Latrie's Tresor several monasteries of St. Salvator are mentioned on pp. 1916-17;—in the diocese of Vannes, Auxerre, Cambrai, St. Omer (at Ham), Contances (Petraponte and le Vicomte), Toul (and en Vosges), Châlons-sur-Marne (de Vertus). Others at Nevers, Arles (with St. Honoratus), Carcassonne, Mans, Andre, Antwerp, Blaye, Évreux, Limoges, Lodève, Marseilles, Narbonne, and Nîmes.

¹ I am inclined, on the whole, to think that the term 'natale' in this case is not the date of a bishop's accession, but is used, as on the 4th Oct. on the same page (xxiii, supra), as equivalent to 'depositio' (carnis), or birth to bliss. We shall perhaps not be wrong in understanding 'pauli epi' to be equivalent to 'Paulini episcopi,' our own Paulinus of York, and his namesake, Bp. of Capua, being alike commemorated on 10th Oct. in the martyrologies. The name 'Paul' seems to be most rare among French bishops, and among the few that there were, I have not been able to ascertain that either of them was enthroned in October.

ANCIENT KALENDAR

THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

EVER since the year 1809 (when John Walker of New College edited it on its first appearance) the 'Oxford University Calendar' has been issued annually.

A list of 'University Ceremonies and Remarkable Days at Oxford,' which for many years has been set out in full almanac form, as the 'Almanac, with Calendar of University Ceremonies and Remarkable Days,' lends its name to the portly volume which comprises also a large accretion of useful or indispensable information, with lists of university officers, class lists, historical notes, &c. &c., forming as time went on a corpus which in a former generation was so considerable and so unwieldy that in 1863 much of this complementary matter was swept away into another post-octavo volume, called the Oxford Ten-Year Book. This left the Oxford University Calendar still a volume of respectable and reasonable thickness.

The kalendar in its simpler form appeared in 1673 as a sheet almanac (as well as in 80), and from that year onward.

Before 1723 the Oxford Almanack was surmounted by emblematic devices 2, which Dean Aldrich was famous for contriving. In 1676 or 1677 some copies were printed on handkerchiefs, as A. Wood mentioned in a letter dated Dec. 13, 1677 3. The series of these famous sheet almanacs has been steadily continued to the present day, with the exception only of the single year 1675.

In 1694-5 Michael Burghers (or 'Burgesse'), who succeeded

¹ John Walker, born in 1769 or 1770, St. Katharine Cree, London, was Scholar of Winchester in 1783. LL.B., Fellow of New Coll, 1788-1820. Vicar of Hornchurch. Editor of Oxoniana, 4 vols. 12mo, 1808; Collections from the Gentleman's Magazine; Oxford Herald, 1806. The Cambridge University Calendar has appeared annually since 1796 (omitting only the year 1798).

² Wood's Life and Times, iv. 84. Dr. Shadwell has (I understand) an Oxford almanac of 1757 printed on silk, the allegorical subject referring to the gift of the Pomfret Marbles. The engraving is in Skelton, plate 59.

David Loggan as university engraver in 1692, received a payment 'for the almanack'.' The famous architectural views of Oxford, which still at the Clarendon Press maintain their reputation, were introduced as a novelty in 1723². From that year, when G. Vertue was engaged by the university, he continued the series to 1756, when he died. In 1745 Dr. Ducarel formed a collection of these Oxford Almanacks, with the engraver Vertue's aid; it passed into Gough's hands, and was by him given to the University of Oxford ³.

Although for a time the Cambridge Press became a favourite resort for the almanac-makers, Oxford was in early days very famous as a centre for such calculations and productions.

Thus we find noticed among Oxford books :-

Synopsis Anni Christi 1637. Sivè Diarium Astronomicum, & Prognosticon Astrologicum & Meteorologicum...Per Ioannem Wyberdum, Philosophicum, Astronomophilon.—160. 1636 4.

Almanack: Sivè Prognosticon Astrologicum & Diarium Meteorologicum, Vel Speculum Anni M.DC.xxxviii. . . . Calculated for the Meridian of the Honourable Citie of London. Autore Iohanne Bookero Astroph.—16°, 1637 ⁵.

An Almanack for the yeare of our Lord 1637... Referred to the famous Universitie and Citie of Oxford; but may indifferently serve for any other place within this Kingdom. By Thomas Cowper.—120.6

Pynson's 'Almanach Ephemerides': 1506-7.

It was with reference to the meridian of Oxford that the noted printer Ri. Pynson in 1507 had printed in 80 the little Computus 'per Wylhelmum Red' (or Rede)⁷, which we will now describe.

- ¹ A series of Cambridge University Almanacks was engraved from 1801 to 1855, the engravings and designs being drawn by Baldry, Barker, the Burfords, R. B. Harraden, Hollis, Bartlett, Kearnan, Storer, Backhouse, Challis, Basevi, Cockerell, Dodgson, and Rudge. After 1855 some of the older engravings were repeated. See J. Willis Clark, Archit. Hist. Camb. I. pp. cxxx-cxxxiv.

 ⁵ Ibid. pp. 195-6.
 ⁶ Ibid. pp. 197-8. A remarkable MS. Kalendar, with Cosmography (finished in 1408), which was given by John Foxton, chaplain to the priory of the Trinitarian Order for Redemption of Captives, at Knaresborough, is now in Trinity Library, Cambridge, MS. R. 15. 21. The Kalendar (as Dr. M. R. James shows) is of York use, and the almanac professes to be 'ad meridiem universitatis, quod suppositum est per .16. minuta hore precise precedere meridiem.' This would be Cambridge, I suppose.

7 'W. Red' is no doubt W. Reade, Fellow of Exeter and Merton, who became Pynson's device, with borders, occupies lf. 1^a, lf. 1^b; below this is his autograph, Rychardus Pyson, huius scriptor.

The remaining two sheets (eights), and five odd leaves are occupied by a treatise in Latin verse with a lengthy commentary: 'In parte precedenti auctor facit mentionem de bissexto: hic determinat de ipso. Et diuiditur ista pars... (ending on lf. 36 b)... que littera erit dominicalis pro predictis ultimis festis mobilibus.'

This is virtually the same work as the metrical Compotus manualis of which we shall have to speak later, and which will be found printed below; but Pynson's book adds a prose gloss or exposition in small type after each paragraph of the verse treatise, as do some other editions.

The set of verses Cisio Ianus adopted by Pynson belong to a different kalendar or 'Use' from that which appears in the Oxford Computus. Both sets will be found in our pages. Pynson (fo. 17) assigns to each month one syllable of the mystic lines which are the original of our old friend

'A. Dam. De. Ge. Bat Er. Go. Ci. Fos. A. Dri. Fos.'

'At Dover Dwells George Brown Esquire, Good Christian Faith,—And Doctor Fryar.'

which tell us on which Sunday letter the kalends of each of the twelve months fall.

The following prose gloss explicatio, on the passage '... ordo requirit' (lines 146-7 of the verse compotus), will give a fair specimen of Pynson's commentary, and of the ordo which was a feature of the classical editions in usum Delphini at a later period.

Diagrams of the Hand.

The human palm and fingers have been found (as we say) handy not only for signalling, for depicting and for writing, but as a portable span or measure, and for weighing and counting. I will not venture to say whether the decimal or quinary system was the consequence of our having twice five fingers, or whether the number of our digits is a consequence of some eternal principle; but there can be no question that the human hand has been a ready and serviceable partner not only in the simpler reckonings of daily life, but also in the more abstruse calculations and computations which (for instance) 'the inconstant moon' and the laws of musical harmony necessitate, as well as in matters of still higher interest 6.

^{3 &#}x27;secundam iuncturam auricularis': the second joint of the little finger, as shown in the diagram, which does not relate to 'palmistry,' as the British Museum Catalogue supposed. ('Palmistria [Salomonis]' with sinistra femelle and dextra masculi occurs apparently twice in a single volume of the Gale MSS. at Trinity College, Cambridge, O. 2. 5, ff. 259-60, and 388-90.)

⁶ A note in a thirteenth-century MS. (B. 14. 39) at Trinity College, Cambridge (the first part of the 'codex consutus, Coll. Trin. Camb.' of Hickes's Thesaurus),

The Computus Manualis (or hand-kalendar) hence derives its name. The manner in which it was employed for finding the movable feasts, &c. will be understood from the text and notes printed below. It will be enough here to give the four figures, cut for Pynson's 'Almanach' in 1506. They bear upon the finger-joints (iuncturae) the memorial lines—

- (i) Filius esto Dei celum bonus accipe gratis
- (ii) (iii) Fructus alit canos Et gallica belli[ca] danos
 Et genitrix bona dat finis amara cadat
 Dat flores anni color eius gaudia busti
 Cambit edens grifo boabel dicens fluet augur 1.
 - (iv) A. B. C.

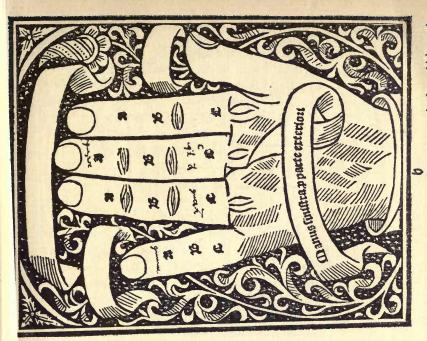

It will be seen that no. (i) is differently 'imposed' on the palm and closed fingers of the hand in Kyrfoth's Compotus, where two figures are devoted to this memoria technica for finding the Sunday Letter of successive years according to their place in the solar cycle. There is a rather different version of these lines in Brit. Mus. MS. Harl. 955, which I have printed as an appendix to the Directorium Sacerdotum ii. 608, for the Henry Bradshaw Society, 1901-2.

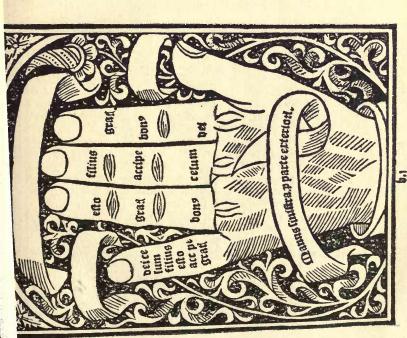

The letters A. B. C. are imposed on the closed finger-joints in Kyrfoth's Compotus. He supplies an open palm for the rest of the Sunday letters, and possibly there was another figure of the same character in Pynson's Almanach, as the one known copy is imperfect.

attaches subjects of self-examination to the thumb and four fingers. See Dr. M. R. James's Catalogue, i. 441. So also in the thirteenth-century miscellaneous collection in the same library, B. 15. 38, art 2, ff. 146b-9, there are diagrams of four hands, illustrating religious duties. Somewhat similar is the large fifteenth century Manus meditationis, with inscribed labels, 'Nescis quantum-quocies-Deum offendisti'; 'Meditari debes quod, Finis tuus amarus est-Vita tua brevis est, &c.—Cum peccato,' &c., on the pew now in the N. transept of Bishops Cannings Church, Wilts., which has been variously described as an open shrivingpew, a Carrell, or studying-pew, or a clerk's or schoolmaster's seat. The pew, however, is probably later than the painted panel. See Wilts. Archaeol. Mag. vi. 147; xix. 136. There are also two diagrams of hands in the Trin. Coll. Cam. MS. R. 15. 21, f. 20, from Knaresborough, written in 1408. I have a little 800 manual, 'Familiare Clericorum, Venetiis, apud Franciscum Bindonum, 1561,' wherein fo. 5a, before the Tonale, shows an open hand with tonic sol-fa gamut on thumb and fingers. On the palm is a 4-line musical staff, 'C naturam dat FB molem G quoque quadrum.' With the phrase 'Sancte Cherubine, doce me cantare.'

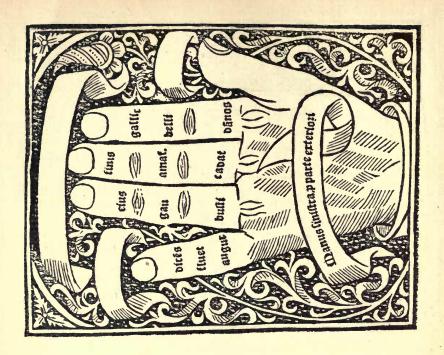

When writing my first note on p. 609 of Directorium Sacerdotum I failed to notice that each word in the line 'Cam-bit e-dens,' &c., consists of at least two syllables, and that the initial letter of the last syllable in each word has to be taken into account, as well as that of the first: so that we get the series of dominical letters for bissextiles, CB. ED. GF. BA. DC. FE. AG.

In Pynson's Almanach Ephemerides (Brit. Mus. C. 20, a. 33) probably two diagrams are missing. In order to arrange the four which remain in such a way as to get the second and third (which form a pair) side by side on our eighth page, we have had to place the fourth figure (signed 'd') next the first (signed 'b, i'. Each of these two has lost its complementary figure.

THE OLD OXFORD KALENDAR OF THE FOURTEENTH CENTURY

FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE UNIVERSITY

In 1868 Mr. Anstey prefixed to his Munimenta Academica (edited under the direction of the Master of the Rolls) a 'Calendar' which gives a general notion of those in the Commissary or Chancellor's and Proctors' Books. It is a convenient and comprehensive compilation for many purposes, in spite of a few omissions, but it is of very little use to us in an investigation of the relative dates of the component parts of the kalendar, nor does it show (as a rule) from which of the MSS. the individual entries are derived.

The Council of the Oxford Historical Society have desired that the kalendar in the Commissary's (or Chancellor's) Book (MS. A) in the University Archives should be printed as it stands, so that it may be read without any additions from the later MSS. C and B, &c.¹ Also, that the original text of MS. A, so far as it can be deciphered, should stand out clearly, and that any later insertions should be indicated by the use of small type, as has been done with excellent effect in Dr. Shadwell's privately printed text of the College Kalendar of Oriel.

MSS. C and B similarly treated, are printed next with the months face to face for comparison.

The Obliterated Passages.

I have spoken of a text 'so far as it can be deciphered.'

It is an unfortunate fact that about twenty-eight entries, some of them being (possibly) entries made by the original scribe in the body of the text, and a larger number of entries added by him, or by later hands, in the margins of his columns, have been most effectually blotted out in a rude and ruthless way.

So far as my experience of MSS. goes, this obliteration may have been effected in either of two ways. I am well acquainted with certain pages of more than one valuable MS. which an historical writer (not long since deceased) with more zeal than knowledge has rendered absolutely illegible, and (so far as applied chemistry has at present enlightened us) perpetually illegible, by the application of a preparation of nut-galls. I have never seen the performance of this experiment (and I trust I may never witness it on any writing of the slightest importance) but I have often heard that for some brief time faded writing is thereby wonderfully revived—but after that (as I can witness) 'total eclipse: all dark.'

As regards our kalendar A, the passages so roughly smeared may have been spoilt by some antiquary of former days. But then what trace is there of the fruits of his nefarious magic? If he took this trouble, why has he not left the transcript of what he presumably read (and spoiled for posterity) on one page, before he repeated the experiment? Surely if he failed in one or two cases, and in them found that he had defeated his own purpose at the moment, he would not have dared to go through all the other columns of the kalendar, and then to the remainder of the statutes and records, working the same worse than useless havoc. As will be seen from the footnotes, there is not much difficulty in conjecturing to what matters nine-tenths of the lost entries referred. But then there are a few of them where the galls were unequally applied, and in these just enough of the text can be made out to recover one or two entries, or three or four consecutive words. However, while these fit in very well with my conjectures as to the substance of the entries which have been thus maltreated, nevertheless the phraseology in which it is expressed points to a verbally different text from what, so far as I have hitherto been able to observe, is recorded in any of the other MSS, which I have seen.

Perhaps I ought here to mention that there is (at July 27)¹ an entry which is now so faint that Mr. Anstey overlooked it ('Dedicacio ecclesie beate Marie'), but which was legible in A. Wood's days². This at first sight might be thought to point to some obliteration by an eighteenth- or nineteenth-century vandal. I must, however, record my conviction that the entry in question is not one of those which were maltreated with galls, but that it was erased under the Act of Henry VIII in 1536, when, e.g. the great printed Breviary of 1531 (in Exeter College) had the national dedication day entered in MS. at the top of the October page in its kalendarium.

³ I read it recently with the help of a magnifying-glass, and I find that Dr. Shadwell also has observed it.

There is, however, another suggestion which may be put forward to account for the black obliterations.

In June, 1534, the name 'ascribed to the bishop of Rome' was ordered to be put out in all service-books and kalendars. In February, 1541-2, and again in February, 1542-3, on the motions of Cranmer 1, further alterations were made in a Protestant direction; and Bishops Goodrich of Elv and Capon of Salisbury were commissioned to see that the obnoxious or 'superstitious' entries were annulled. This was effected in various ways. In a few instances a leaf could be removed, occasionally a pen was simply drawn across to cancel the condemned passage, sometimes an erasure was made with a penknife, more often inquisitor's ink was rubbed over it. This was usually of a red colour, but occasionally I have seen blackened passages in old English servicebooks which seem to betoken the use of galls, or a plentiful effusion of ink. I have at this moment in my study one MS. and three printed books of Sarum use. These are a Missal in MS. of the beginning of the fifteenth century, and a Pye, a Missal, and a Prymer or Horae in print. The MS. has had the name 'papa' and 'Thomas' (the martyr) merely erased with a knife, and then the names inked-in again by a papistical hand under Philip and Mary, no further cancelling having been at any time effected. At King Edward VI's reformation the MS.—the Hambleton Missal, which has been lent by Mr. H. H. Peach—appears to have been successfully hidden in a farm-house in Leicestershire (old Lincoln diocese) until it was discovered just fifty years ago.

Of the three printed volumes now before me, a copy of Horae B. V. Mariae has escaped the inquisitors altogether; the Pye has had the name of St. Thomas of Canterbury drawn through with a pen where it has been noticed. The kalendar is lost in my copy, but 'papa,' which rarely occurs in the text of the Pye, has not been observed. The Missal has the word 'papa' simply erased, and the same treatment has usually been meted out to Becket's name and services, but where this has not sufficed black ink has been drawn over it with a pen or stick, and the Good Friday prayers for the pope are inked. In the canon of the mass 'papa' is erased and the adjoining words are inked. For the indulgences to the mass Recordare, first erasure and then cancelling with black ink has been applied. But in the parallel passages in certain MSS. inquisitor's black will sometimes be observed.

As the passages obliterated in the kalendar of the Oxford Commissary's Book appear to relate to dirges and masses of the dead, it seems natural to suppose that they were blotted out, because they were considered to be superstitious. In fact I can only think of one other supposition, namely that they had first been rendered faint by some sort of washing out or partial rubbing out, and that then in comparatively modern times an antiquary applied galls because he found that they had become faint under the inquisitor's hand. It is hardly credible either that any one who was working as a transcriber should not have tried his hand upon some other class of entries and have rendered them black, or that only just this class of entries should have become difficult to read while all the black-letter saints, &c., had remained clear enough for his purposes, unless indeed some deliberate attempt had been previously made to render them all alike illegible, or in some way to abrogate them. The antiquary of our latter hypothesis must have been dealing with passages obliterated by a Protestant and not by Father Time.

We have, however, one other consideration to take into account. While my theory of an inquisitorial blackening in the sixteenth century accounts satisfactorily for the elimination of these passages in the kalendar: will it hold good likewise for similar blackening of sentences in the statutes which are entered upon the later pages of the volume? My impression (after the brief inspection that Mr. Madan and I had time to give to that part of the volume) is, that this supposition may account for some of the eliminations,—for instance (on fo. 73), the inscription on a tablet in St. Frideswyde's ',—but not perhaps for all. However, I must leave the investigation of this matter to some who are resident in Oxford, and who can find leisure to examine the manuscript on some bright day in summer, with younger eyes, as well as a good magnifying-glass to help them.

One other theory has occurred to my mind:—that the book, both in the kalendar and in the body of the statutes, may have been overhauled at the time of the Laudian codification, and obsolete ceremonies and ordinances may have been thus blotted out by an unrelenting hand, with the simple purpose of abolishing what was abrogated or obsolete, and with a view to make the book a working copy for the use of the University officials of that day.

¹ Munimenta Academica, i. 37, where see Mr. Anstey's note. He speaks of Bryan Twyne as having transcribed afresh the obliterated inscription. Can he have recovered it from some other source, or are we to lay to his charge the application of the galls to this and perhaps the other passages which he found had been previously rendered scarcely legible?

What our Text is.

We give here the original text of A alone, indicating by small type what entries were inserted in that volume.

After the text of A we give in full the kalendars from the somewhat later Proctor's Books, viz.:—

Archiv. C. the Junior, or Northern, Proctor's Book, written for (Bp.) Fleming in 1407, and Archiv. B. the Senior, or Southern, Proctor's Book, written a few years later.

Fourteenth-Century Kalendar for the Meridian of Oxford.

In 1391-2, apparently on March 12¹, a treatise on the 'Astrolabie' was composed 'as for oure orizonte, compouned after the latitude of Oxenford... after the kalendors of the reverent clerkes, frere I. Somer and frere N. Lenne, compiled by Geoffrey Chauciers for his son Lewis, scholar at Oxenford, under master N. Strode tutor.' To 'master Strode' we shall have to refer in a later section.

At St. John's College, Cambridge, there is a manuscript Psalter 'cum tabulis kalendariis, opusculo ad instanciam Iohane principisse Wallie matris Ricardi II, ad meridiem vniuersitatis Oxon., ex precepto reuerendi patris Thome Kyngisburi, ministri anglie, composito a fratre Io. Somur, Ordinis minorum, anno Domini 13802.'

I suppose it was with reference to the meridian of Oxford 3 that ¹ Chaucer gives two examples, calculated for March 12, 1391-2, which may therefore be reasonably taken as the date when he was writing his Treatise on the Astrolabie. For MSS. see Dr. Skeat's Student's Chaucer, p. 730.

James, Catalogue of MSS. at Peterhouse, p. 364 (Appendix).

3 In his Introduction to Ant. Wood's Life and Times, i. 10-14, Mr. A. Clark gives some attention to Wood's collection of Almanacks (circ. 1629-95). Benjamin Pond seems to have issued almanacs for, or at, Oxford (but also at Cambridge) s.a. 1641, 1662, 1664, 1680, 1681, 1689. The following he assigns to Cambridge:—J. Wing, 1658, 1665, 1686, 1689; J. Swan, 1667, 1683; J. Dove, 1682, 1684. See also Ephemerides by W. Frost, P. Rivers, T. Rudston, W. Strof, F. Waters, and Fri. Winter, at the British Museum, and in Mr. Ro. Bowes's Catalogue of Cambridge Books, nos. 189 a-c; 3239, 3242, 3313, 3329, 3392. (These five, from Mr. Jenkinson's list.)

J. Foxton, chaplain, made, and gave to the Minister and Brethren (of Holy Trinity for Redemption of the Captives) at St. Robert's, Knaresburgh, a kalendar of York Use, with Cosmography, Prognostication, &c. in 1408, which is now in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge (R. 15. 21)¹.

Differentia of Oxford University Calendars.

Having traced the general kalendars of Oxonian construction up to brother John Summer in 1380, we must now proceed to inquire into the more particular characteristics which concern the University in its corporate condition.

A glance at the 'University Calendar' of modern times brings to our notice several items, most of which do not occur in the ordinary almanac of commerce. Not to mention such particulars as election days at various colleges, the openings and closings of Bodley, and some of the dates of University examinations and the like, I notice in two Oxford Calendars which I happen to have before me (for the years 1822 and 1869) the following entries:—

Jan. 12 (Sat.). Latin Litany and Sermon at St. Mary's, previously to the beginning of Term, at 9 a.m.

Jan. 14. Hilary, or Lent Term, begins.

Jan. 30. K. Ch. I, Mart. Prayers and Sermon at St. Mary's. The Preacher appointed by the Vice-Chancellor (1822).

Feb. 6. Responsions commence (1822).

Feb. 10. Sexagesima Sunday. Scholastica. Litany read at the altar of St. Mary's church, after which the Mayor, the two Bailiffs, and sixty of the burghers of the city of Oxford, make an offering of a silver penny each, as an atonement for the murder of some scholars, which took place in an affray in the year 1353, 27 Edward III (1822; in 1869 simply 'Ash Wednesday. Scholastica').

Feb. [Saturday before Quinquagesima]. Festum Ovorum (1822 adds 'No one, who has not been admitted to his Bachelor's Degree on or before this day, will be presented to determine during the present year').

- ('Feb. 20. Ash Wednesday. Latin Litany and Sermon at St. Mary's.' 1822. 'On the Sundays in Lent, the afternoon Sermons are at St. Peter's, and the Preachers are appointed by the Vice-Chancellor.' 1822.)
- Feb. 27. i.e. Wednesday after 1st Sunday in Lent. [The new] Proctors elected [by their Societies, and their elections, respectively, announced to the Vice-Chancellor. add. 1822].
- ¹ 'Ad honorem Dei et Virginis gloriose hoc kalendarium institutum est per .16. minuta hore precise precedere meridiem.' See Dr. M. R. James, Catalogue of Western MSS. at Trin. Coll. Cam. ii. p. 358, cod. 943.

March 25. *Annunciation. Sermon in New College chapel.

March 30. Hilary or Lent Term ends. Last Saturday in Lent. A Latin speech in the Theatre by the Junior Proctor.

(April 5.) Good Friday. Sermon at Christ Church.

(April 7.) * Easter Day. No University Sermon in the morning. In the afternoon [the Sermon is at St. Peter's (1822)] the Preacher appointed by the Vice-Chancellor.

April 16. Tuesday. Latin Litany and Sermon at St. Mary's (1822).

April 17. Wednesday. Easter Term begins. The new Proctors admitted at two o'clock in the afternoon into office in the Convocation House, where a Latin speech is delivered by the Senior Proctor going out of office (1822).

April 25. St. Mark. Sermon in Magdalen College ['chapel,' 1822].

May I. St. Philip and St. James. Sermon in Merton College [chapel].

(May 16.) *Ascension Day ['Holy Thursday,' 1869]. Sermon at Christ Church.

May 29. King Charles II restored. Prayers and Sermon at St. Mary's (1822).

(May 30. Thursday.) Trinity ['or Act,' add. 1822] Term begins. ['Latin Litany and Sermon at St. Mary's, at nine o'clock. Masters of the Schools nominated.' 1822.]

(June 2.) *Trinity Sunday. Sermon in the morning in New College chapel; in the afternoon at St. Mary's.

June 19. Wednesday. ENCÆNIA, or Celebration of Founders and Benefactors ['in the Theatre,' add. 1822].

June 24. St. John Baptist ['Midsummer Day,' 1869]. 'Sermon in Magdalen College Chapel.' 1822.

June 30. * Fourth Sunday after Trinity. This being the last Sunday in June, and Act Sunday, the Preacher is appointed by the Vice-Chancellor (1822). 'Both Preachers appointed by the V.-C. Full Service, with Holy Communion, at St. Mary's in the morning.' (4 July) 1869.

July 2. Tu. * Oxford Act. Admissions to Regency (1822).

(July 6.) Sat. Trinity Term ends.

July 7. Thomas à Becket (1869).

Aug. 4. Ninth Sunday after Trinity. Sermon in Merton College Chapel (1822).

Aug. 15. Assumption B.V. M. (1869). 'Queen's College Found. day' (1822).

Sept. 30. Monday. Oath administered to the Mayor on his coming into office, before the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors, at St. Mary's (1822).

^{*} Those Sundays or Holidays on which the Doctors wear their dress gowns ['their robes,' 1869] at Church, are marked thus.

Oct. 6. Faith (1869). 'Eighteenth Sunday after Trinity.  The Vice-Chancellor, at twelve o'clock, resigns his office, with a Latin speech, and a new nomination takes place, and is approved in Convocation, a day or two before the term commences' (1822). 'The Chancellor's nomination of a Vice-Chancellor for the ensuing year is read in Convocation' (1869).

We could trace many of these entries back to the reign of King Charles I, and some of them, of course, to mediaeval times. But first we must pause a while about the year 1636, when we found the almanac-makers printing at the Oxford Press.

Corpus Statutorum.

About July, 1634, the first Laudian code of University Statutes was printed in folio (Corpus Statutorum Vniversitatis Oxon. sive pandectes constitutionum academicarum). A copy printed on vellum for King Charles is now in the British Museum (c. 24. d.). This book contains an 'Admonitio ad Lectorem de veteri calendario omisso?'.

The meaning of this is easily understood, when we recollect that the old Commissary's or Proctors' Book of University Statutes had a kalendar prefixed to them. Of this we will presently speak more at large.

In 1635 a supplementary publication was issued, in part intended to supply the place of the aforesaid kalendar. A large quarto broadsheet, measuring upwards of 16 inches square, presented to the eye a series of concentric circles, running round a representation of the Sun in the centre, and exhibiting a Cyclus Praelectorum or syllabus of the days, hours, subjects and books for lectures for the current year, with the amount to be levied as a fine upon defaulting teachers or pupils.

This cyclus, or chart, has the fuller title of

'Encyclopædia, Seu orbis literarym, prout in florentissimâ iam et omnium planè celeberrima academiâ Oxoniensi, singulis Terminis publicè in Scholis auditoribus proponuntur¹.'

With this was connected the publication of a companion folio of two pages, containing a summary of such statutes as concerned persons in statu pupillari which since January, 1637-8, has been superseded by constant editions of Parecholæ, sive Statuta Selecta è Corpore Statutorum, a little book of which I happen to possess copies printed at the Clarendon Press in 1825 and 1854 respectively, and of which Mr. Madan mentions twenty-eight other editions (Early Press, p. 209). It was usual for every undergraduate to receive a copy on his matriculation 2. The earlier paper, published in 1635, was drawn up, as Mr. Madan suggests, like the Cyclus or Encyclopædia, by T. Crossfield of Queen's. It is called

'Synopsis sev epitome statutorum, Eorum praesertim, quæ Iuventuti Academ. Oxon: maxime expedit pro Doctrind & Moribus habere cognita.'

In January, 1637-8, came out the selection from the revised edition of the Laudian code in book form 16°. (It runs to 236 pages.)

STATUTA Selecta è Corpore Statutorum UNIVERSITATIS OXON, Vt in promptu & ad ma-num sint, quæ magis ad usum (præcipuè Iuniorum) facere videntur³.'

¹ F. Madan, Early Oxford Press, pp. 186-7.

² The editions before me contain, besides select statutes, with those for the Bodleian Library, an Epinomis or 'explanatio iuramenti,' with the XXXIX Articles of Religion, in Latin, required at Oxford as a test upon matriculation, with the Three Articles of the 36th Canon Ecclesiastical, &c.

³ Madan, Early Oxford Press, pp. 208-9.

Of this there is a copy in the British Museum (731. b. 9). It contains like the fuller book of 1634 an Admonitio ad lectorem de veteri Calendario omisso, and a table of 'Non Dis. days,' i.e. holidays on which the formal academic exercises called 'disputations' were not allowed to be held for qualifying a student for his degree.

This was one of the principal constituent items in the old kalendars which were prefixed to the 'Proctors' Books' of Statutes and Ordinances of the University.

The Latin Historia et Antiquitates Universitatis Oxoniensis of Anthony Wood, as edited by Ri. Reeves and Ri. Peers for the University in 1674, contains the following passage concerning the antient course in the Faculty of Arts:—

'Sic peragendus erat audiendi, partimque legendi cursus, plura mehercule complectens, quam quae deinceps in usu apud nos fuerant. Enimvero morem vetustissimum vel exinde colligas, quod diebus quoque festis, audiendum legendumque fuit, cum per statuta nostra olim etiam antiquata id minime licuerit, velut è Calendariis de more praefixis ediscas; ubi dies interstinctos reperies per le & non le, dis & non dis, & per le fe; quibus legibiles nempe & non legibiles, disputabiles & non disputabiles, & dies legibiles festinanter denotari solebant; Le interim & dis ad dies festos rarissime adfixis, quibus nimirum rebus sacris, animisque colligendis vacandum erat. Credo autem consuetudinem illam, quâ diebus etiam festis legebant, ab Universitate Parisiensi desumptam fuisse; cuius in plerisque ad praelectiones spectantibus sequaces fuimus. Cum Gyraldus enim Alumnus Oxoniensis, Lutetiae operam literis tempore Henrici II. daret, positum tum apud Parisienses in more erat, ut praelectiones diebus non tantum festis, sed & Dominicis haberentur, quibus & ipse Gyraldus, magna Magistrorum & Scholarium frequentia stipatus [Vita Sylv. Gyraldi Ms. cap. 13], Decretalia haud semel explicuit.'

Hist. et Antt. i. p. 22.

'Algorismo, Sphaerae, Computo: dies cuilibet octo exclusis Festis dabantur.' (Ibid.)

Another distinctive feature of the old kalendar was the entry on the proper days of such obits, evensongs or vespers of the Dead (Placebo) and 'dirges' (Dirige, Domine) or mattins of the Dead, with masses (of Requiem or the like) prescribed for annual commemoration of certain Benefactors of the University. These, of course, had been swept away long before Laud's time by King Henry VIII and Edward VI, and again by Queen Elizabeth.

Other entries in the old kalendar were the rules for finding the beginning and end of Term, or at least of the 'resumption' and 'cessation' of the public lectures of Regent Masters, and the special masses which were appointed at the beginning and ending of the year of study.

A seventeenth-century copy of the old Statutes of the University of Oxford is preserved in the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge, MS. R. 15.3.(3)³. So far as I can judge from a specimen page, kindly transcribed for me by the Rev. Hugh F. Stewart, this MS. was derived from the Oxford Senior Proctor's Book (Arch. B) rather than from A or C.

The old kalendar here occupies fourteen leaves. Then follow the 'Sequentiæ of the Gospels' which are usually prefixed to Prymers or Books of Hours (In principio, Missus est Gabriel, Cum natus esset, and Recumbentibus), followed by the unusual Ascendens Iesus Ierosolymam (St. Matt. xx. 17-19) which is the Sarum Gospel for the votive mass de S. Cruce, ascribed to Alcuin, and usually said on Fridays 4.

Then follows the historical (or legendary) document which Mr. Anstey prints at the opening of the second volume of his Munimenta Acad. Oxon. pp. 367-9, from fourteenth- and fifteenth-century MSS. After which there are in the Trinity transcript about 350 pages of Ancient Statutes of the University, continued to 1617.

A manuscript in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, Bodl. MS. Top. Oxon. b. 5 (olim Arch. Bod. E.) has an old kalendar at ff. 130-1.

Another MS., 8° Rawl. 662, is a printed kalendar from a Sarum Breviary or *Portiforium*⁵ in which a University Bedel has entered Oxford kalendar notes in the margin, supplementing them with various memoranda concerning his office on some of the fifty pages of paper which were bound up in a leather cover.

G. Darrell of All Souls, who was proctor in 1604, made a collection of the Statutes, including a kalendar of this kind.

There is a transcript of the old Proctors' Books occupying eighty-six folios of parchment, formerly marked 'D,' and now MS. Bodl. 337. But from this the kalendar had been removed before Brian Twyne's time, 1674.

Happily, however, the originals from which the foregoing was transcribed are still among the archives of the University of Oxford, as we shall see presently.

Our Authorities.

Here we may mention in passing the printed Compotus manualis ad vsum Oxoniensium, 4° Oxon., C. Kyrfoth, 1519-20, of which a unique copy is preserved in the University Library at Cambridge. This, with the manuscripts now to be mentioned, forms our principal authority.

They are, to take them in the inverse order of their date,

MS. B. The Southern (or Senior) Proctor's Book, A.D. 1477, when it was written at a cost to the University of £7 8s. 10d.²

MS. C. The Northern (or Junior) Proctor's Book, A.D. 1407, written for Ric. Fleming, when proctor. He was Bishop of Lincoln (1420-31), and in 1429 began the foundation of Lincoln College, Oxford, where his obit was kept on January 25.

MS. A. The Chancellor's or Commissary's Book, in which the collection of Statutes was compiled about 1350. The kalendar prefixed to it is said to be not later than 1420.

A MS. at Trinity College, Cambridge.

Dr. M. R. James, in his Catalogue of the Western Manuscripts at Trinity College, Cambridge, ii. p. 313, describes a copy of Chirurgia Guiscardi, which has, bound up with it, an early fourteenth-century kalendar of foreign origin, apparently from the north of France. It came, however, into England, and was used by some proctor or official in Oxford (much as the printed breviary kalendar cir. 1505 was used subsequently) for adapting as an academical kalendar.

I am inclined to think that the MS. now in Trinity College, Cambridge, gives us the thing in its earliest form now accessible to us. Inserted among the holy days of this Breton or Norman kalendar³, we find, after it had come to England, the entry of the Oxford St. Frideswide's 'Translation' on Feb. 12, and her 'Invention' on May 18, besides her festival on Oct. 19, and such national saints as David, Chad, and Patrick, as interpolations.

Then among noticeable entries as 'Inicium predicacionis Christi' on May 2, and St. Francis, added with special honour on Oct. 4 (perhaps as early as 1240)1, we find the following Oxford University directions at July 6, 'Missa de cessacione, de Trinitate,' and at Oct. 10, 'Missa de resumpcione, de S. Spiritu,' which are the statutable devotions for the end and at the beginning, respectively, of the academical year of reading lectures. We print this kalendar at the end of our preface.

The Obits and Commemorations.

The list of services for the commemoration of individual benefactors in the Trinity College, Cambridge, MS. is interesting:-

22nd Feb. 'Missa pro anima Domine Ele de Longespeie, cum placebo et dirige.' (d. 6 Feb. 1297.)

2nd March. 'S. Cedde. Missa pro anima magistri Philippi Turuel, et sunt ordinaciones 2.1 (d. 1337.)

1st May. 'Missa pro W. G(re)y.' (d. 1 May, 1255.)

10th May. 'Obitus Reginaldi bedelli cum placebo et dirige.' (See Cartulary of St. Frideswide's, i. 273 n., 415; c. 1230-1316.)

13th May. 'Semper quarta feria post trinitatem, missa pro Gilberto de Roubiry.' (cir. 1314. Munim. Acad. i. 102-3.)

25th May. 'Missa pro Gilberto de Leupardo.' (d. 12 Feb. 1305.)

16th June. 'Missa Lang.' (? J. Langton, d. 17 June, 1337.)

25th June. 'Missa pro H. Herclay. le. fe.' (d. cir. 1315.)

23rd Nov. 'Missa pro Ela com*itissa*.' (d. 1297.) 30th Nov. 'Missa pro Elianora regina.' (d. 29 Nov. 1290.)

6th Dec. 'Missa pro Iohanne de Pontois.' (d. 4 Dec. 1304.)

17th Dec. 'Missa pro Henrico de Lacy.' (d. 1312.)

It will be observed that the dates of the obits of the benefactors in this list range from 1255 to 1337.

The later kalendars, as seen in the Proctors' Books, &c., contain no

1 St. Francis was canonized in 1228, two years after his departure. Otho, the legate, published the canonization in England, July 12, 1237. The festival was enjoined by Bp. Cantilupe in the Synod of Worcester, July 26, 1239. I feel, however, some suspicion as to the text, because it mentions also St. Edmund the Confessor who did not die until Nov. 16, 1240. However, St. Edmund was canonized by acclamation so promptly that the text of the constitution may have had his name interpolated within two years of its first promulgation.

obits of earlier date than these, unless it be that of King Henry on Nov. 16, which seems to refer to Henry III, who died on that day in 1272. See Mun. Acad. ii. 370, in the memorandum for the use of the Proctors, drawn up some time after 1318, and possibly not much less than a century later.

The Proctors' Books of the early part of the fifteenth century, onward, contain all the obits of the Trinity College manuscript, and the following also in addition:—

? 1344. Walter Neal, lord of Effingham. 22nd January.

1346. Thomas Vaughan, Waghan, Wagam, or Wacchane. 9th April.

1356. Humphrey Cherleton, Chancellor of Oxford. 20th Nov.

? 1360. William Shelton, or Celtone, canon of Wells. 6th May.

1362. John de Gynewell (or Sinwell), Bp. of Lincoln. 28th Feb. (d. 5th Aug.)

1366. Symon Islip, Abp. 28th Feb. (d. 26th Apr.)

1366. William Edyngton, Bp. of Winton. 28th Feb. (d. 7th or 8th August.)

1369. Lewis Charleton, D.C.L., Bp. of Hereford (20 Nov.). d. 24 June.

1373. John de Thoresby, Abp. of York. 28th Feb. (d. 6 Nov.)

1377. King Edward III. 25th January. (d. 21st June.) 1397. Thomas, duke of Gloster. 25th Jan. (d. 24th Sept.)

(1399, or 1485.) 'Richard the King.' 13th Oct.

1413. K. Henry IV. 18th March. (d. 20th March.)

1419. John Aylmere, doctor of Laws. 12th Nov.

1422. K. Henry V. 31st Oct. (d. 31st August.) 1443. Henry Chichele, Abp. 26th Apr. (d. 12 April.)

1447. Humfrey, duke of Gloster. 23rd Feb. and 28th Oct.

? 1447. Henry Beaufort, Cardinal. 11th April.

1457. Dame Joan Danvers. 13th Nov.

1457. Duncan, or Dunkan, about 19th April.

[1502. Q. Elizabeth of York. 10th Feb. (d. 11th Feb.) MS. B, in margin.]

? 1509. K. Henry VII. 11th May. (d. 21st April.)

I feel some doubt as to the date of the first entry in this list.

Walter Neel's chest (cista de Neel) is mentioned frequently in Oxford records. The 'missa Neel' on St. Vincent's Day, in a memorandum cir. 1350, or at all events in the lifetime of J. de Shepey who died in 1360 (Mun. Acad. i. 168). Walter de Neel is called dominus de Effyngham by a scribe in MS. A. fol. 94. His cista is named among 'Winter chests,' Dec. 9, 1449 (Reg. Univ. i. Boase, p. 287), and Dec. 4, 1456 (Mun. Acad. ii. 745), and again in 1510 (Reg. i. 298). The mass for his soul is mentioned in the notes about the kalendar which contain references to masses ranging from 1255 to 1377 (Mun. Acad. ii. 372-3). In the Cartulary of St. Frideswide's, i. 92, a 'view' of the monastery as visited by Bishop Russell in 1482-3 mentions among debts 'pro denariis mutuatis a ... Waltero Nele, xvii.l. vi.s. viii.d.' This may have been a later namesake, or as I incline to think 'Nele' and 'Langston' may refer to the Neal and Langton chests. At Cambridge also there was a cista de Neele of which the founder (jointly with 'John Whithorn, rector of Hotsted'?) was Walter Neele. The record of its foundation is preserved in the Registry at Cambridge (Document 35, Drawer i. 7), and is dated Feb. 25, 1344-5. Fuller, in his History of Cambridge (following Dr. Caius), describes Water Neele as 'citizen of London'.'

Assuming Walter Neel to have founded a chest at Oxford about the same time as he did at Cambridge, namely in February, 1345, we may conclude that the Kalendar now preserved at Trinity College, Cambridge, was converted into an 'Oxford University Calendar' between 1337 and 1345, or, in other words, just before the earliest of the Proctors' Books now extant at Oxford (of course a much more pretentious or important volume) was compiled.

The Trinity manuscript in fact supplies the 'missing' link between the kalendar of ordinary ecclesiastical use, and the special book provided for the officials of the University. Besides the memorial masses and other annual services for the later, and then quite recent, benefactors of the University, the Commissary's and Proctors' Books contain some additional academical entries of the same character as those two early ones which we have noted in the Trinity College, Cambridge, MS., which prescribed the 'Mass of the Holy Ghost' at the 'Resumption' of Regent Masters' lectures on October 10.3, and the 'Mass of Holy Trinity' at their 'Cessation' on July 6.5.

From these entries the limits of the four Oxford terms may be deduced.

| Term. | Resumption. | Cessation. | |
|--|--|--|--|
| Michaelmas Hilary Easter | October 10 January 14 Wednesday after Low } Sunday | December 17 Eve of Palm Sunday Thursday before Whitsuntide (Octave of Ascension) | |
| 4. Trinity | Wednesday after Trinity (Eve of Corpus Christi) | September 14 (as arranged) | |

Of the eight guiding dates only the first three are absolutely fixed, in the perpetual kalendar, to certain days in the almanack. The next four may vary from year to year (like Easter Day and other 'moveable feasts') over a period of thirty-five days: e.g. Hilary Term which begins always on January 14, irrespective of the day of the week, may end in one year as early as March 14, and in another year as late as April 17, or else on some date intermediate between the two.

The Mass is entered on July 5 in MS. B, prima manu, but subsequently corrected on to July 6, which is the place where the memoria technica of the Computus places it. See also the interpretation of the constitution De resumpcione, printed in Mun. Acad. ii. 447, which declares that thenceforth the Masters were not to fix the cessation of lectures 'citra proximum diem legibilem ante festum translacionis sancti Thome.' The last 'le day' before St. Thomas the Martyr's day was July 4. So there was a certain reasonableness for the original entry in the 'Southern' (or Senior) Proctor's Book (B) in 1477. There was a vacation at Oxford, Sept. 14 (Holy-rood day, a full fortnight before Michaelmas) to Oct. 10 (the morrow of St. Denys). See Mun. Acad. ii. 447: 'continuent secundum beneplacitum legencium vsque ad .xv. dies ante festum S. Michaelis, quia solum solet esse aliquando tempus vacacionis per illum mensem.' It will be observed that octavo die ante natale is the morrow of O Sapientia.

If we were constructing such a perpetual almanack now, for University purposes, we should place the Cessacio of Hilary Term either at the foot of the page for March with a note to state the rule for fixing it, or else we might state on March 14 that this is the prima cessacio or earliest possible date for concluding lectures, and perhaps add also a corresponding note ultima cessacio on April 17 (as we find Primum Pascha, vltima Pentecoste, &c. in Sarum kalendars).

Why then was this Cessacio placed on March 22 (instead of the 14th)? Surely this is an unnatural date for the 'eve of Palm Sunday, the more so when a fixed date (Resurreccio Domini) for Easter Day is put down in the Proctor's almanack on March 27, which is—not the earliest possible Easter anniversary, which is March 22, but—the actual kalendar date of the historical Resurrection of Christ according to the tradition handed down in Sarum and other mediaeval kalendars. If the Oxford kalendar-maker had followed that lead, when he had before him (and actually transcribed) that note about Resurreccio Domini, he ought to have entered Vigilia Palmarum (a date very important from the academical point of view) on March 19, to correspond with such an Easter Day. But he entered it neither on the 19th, nor on the 14th, but on March 22.

The Date when the Kalendar was Compiled.

The inference which I draw from this is, that the compiler of the first Commissary's or Proctor's kalendar drew it up from (or as) an almanack serving for some year having Sunday letter E, with epact vii, ix, xi, or xij, and on which Easter Day fell on March 30, and (agreeably thereto) 'Palmeson-Eve' on Saturday, March 22¹, the Wednesday after Quasimodo (or Low Sunday) on April 9, the Wednesday before Pentecost on May 14, and the Wednesday after Trinity on May 28.

There were not many such years in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries¹. Between 1236 and 1483 only three such years occurred, viz. 1320, which is perhaps too early, and 1399 and 1404, either of which would suit Mr. Anstey's date for the kalendar in his earliest MS., the Commissary's book A, the body of which collection he has described as compiled originally about 1350 or later, and its kalendar of not a later date than 1420².

¹ It may be noticed that both March 22 and 23 have Vigilia Palmarum entered on them. The former is correct (in accordance with the three other entries). But 1404 (as well as 1236 and 1320) chanced to be bissextile, and the scribe may have got his pen on letter E for the Saturday, before recollecting that he was dealing with a leap year.

I would suggest then, that the Ancient Oxford Kalendar existed in some rudimentary shape as early as 1340-5 and that it assumed its more definite form in 1403-4.

Of certain Notes and Entries in the Kalendar.

The entry on St. Scholastica's Day (Feb. 10) refers, I need hardly mention, to the condition imposed by John Gynewell or Kynwell's, Bishop of Lincoln (dated, Lidington manor, Rutland, June 7, 1357), with the consent of the Mayor, Bailiffs and Citizens, that he would remove the interdict, laid upon the city in consequence of the murder of certain scholars in a riot, on consideration that they should for ever after, upon the anniversary of the crime, provide a mass in St. Mary's Church, whereat the Mayor and Bailiffs and sixty of the more substantial citizens should each offer his mass-penny in token of their contrition 4.

The fourteenth-century kalendar (now at Trinity College, Cambridge) has one entry which deserves special notice—

(June 25) 'Missa pro H. Herclay. le. fe.'

The mass in question was established about 1315. The Bedel's notes mention the dirge (or mattins of the dead) on the previous day (St. John the Baptist's) in H. de Hercley's memory. I do not notice any original entry about his obit or any blotting out of writing in the Commissary's Book (A) at Oxford. But 'Dirige' has been interlined there by a later hand. The next official MSS., the Proctors' Books (C and B), have the entry as an original part of their kalendars—

June 25, vii. kl. Jul. 'Missa pro anima Henrici Herkley. le. fe.'

¹ Such years correspond to no. 9 in De Morgan's Book of Almanacks. In the Middle Ages they would be distinguished as 'Secundum E.' in the Sarum Pye or Ordinale.

St. Eloy (Sci Eligij) though noticed in A, is passed over by C and B.

The note 'le. fe.' is illustrated by the ancient customs of the University of Paris 1, and by the Oxford Statutes under the rubric De diebus festiuis, in quibus magistri festine legant. 'If it happen that notice be given by the public servant (the bedellus) that a simple feast occurs on which they shall read (or lecture) with despatch 2, let them not keep disputations on that day. But if according to the kalendar it be a dies non legibilis (a "non le" day), then let them appoint some lecture from some book out of the ordinary course (de libro aliquo non vsitato), or from the book some section which is specially reserved for extraordinary lectures, as they may prefer, approved for holy days 3.'

According to Dean Peacock's Observations on the Statutes of the University of Cambridge, 1841, appendix, p. iv. n., on lefe days, or Dies legibiles festinanter, lectures at Paris and Oxford 4 were anciently read cursorie 5, as was done in certain seasons of the year, and on Sundays, and which were chiefly confined to the Ethics of Aristotle'—not (one would have thought) a book exactly adapted for reading the text too quickly for taking down by the auditors, and without gloss or comment, which is one rational interpretation of 'cursory' lecturing 6. In old days, when books were dear and students poor, a lecturer who would read so deliberately (as Bishop J. B. Lightfoot, a prince of lecturers, used to do) that his audience could follow his words, and who pronounced them ad pennam, so that they could write down text or gloss at his dictation, must have been reckoned a benefactor. Dr. Rashdall, however, shows that 'dictation,' though a common prac-

But on careful consideration of the text of the statute in MS, C (fol. 27) I am convinced that the reading is festine, as given by Mr. Anstey. I could not identify this passage in A, as his reference to fol. '6' of that MS, appears to be a misprint.

tice at Paris, was forbidden in 'ordinary' hours at Bologna (i. 220), and statutes were passed against lecturing tractim at Paris itself, except (as Ramus also says) in the case of some 'notable' tractate or sentence (i. 438). Mr. Rashdall, who tells us that at Oxford festine is simply synonymous for cursorie or extraordinarie (Univ. i. 427-8 n.), considers that the cursory lectures of Paris were simply what at Bologna were called lectiones extraordinariae, and opposed to lectiones ordinariae, which were those delivered by Masters during the morning hours of legible days, the dies legibiles, or 'le' days of English universities (i. 426). Cursory lectures might be delivered even in the Long Vacation. The principal Terms were called at Paris the 'Grand Ordinary,' lasting from St. Remigius' day-Oct. 1-to Easter, broken only by the short Christmas holidays, and the 'Little Ordinary,' extending from Easter to the end of June, or Midsummer. Even from Midsummer to Michaelmas (St. John Baptist's Nativity to St. Remigius) private arrangements could be made for the less dignified classes of lectures (Rashdall, i. 477). The 'Long' or 'Great Vacation,' at the end of the fourteenth century, began at terce on the Vigil of St. Peter and St. Paul (June 28) and lasted for the Faculty of Arts to the morrow of St. Louis (Aug. 25-6), or for that of Theology and Canon Law up to Holy-rood day, the Exaltation of the Cross (Sept. 15). Then 'ordinary' lectures might begin, but Oct. 1 was the real date for beginning courses in earnest. (Cf. ibid.)

Although vacations in early times were short—and at Aberdeen Bishop W. Elphinston in 1494 designed to do without them altogether (Rashdall, ii. 310 n.)—the terms' work was in point of practice largely eaten into by the occurrence of holy days and other occasions which involved a holiday from doctors' or masters' formal lectures, and sometimes also from the exercitia or disputations.

From the point of view of the lecturer and the lectured every day in the year was either a 'le-day' (dies legibilis') or a 'non le-day,' with the exception of some few half-hearted 'le-fe' or 'le-fes' days. Again, from the standpoint of those engaged in academic 'disputations' and such-like exercises in the 'Schools' as were required with a view to 'inception,' 'determination,' &c., in the system of university faculties and degrees there was another and in part a cross-division into 'dysses' and 'non dis' days (dies disputabiles and non disputabiles).

The following note by J. Mere, at the Marian Visitation of Cambridge in Feb. 1556-7, illustrates the use of these terms at the sister University:—

'On Saturday [.xx. Feb.] frost colde wynde snow and som rayne. Item, no lector in the scholes this daye nor thursdaye [.xviii. Feb.] save only the physicke lect., and yet it was dis both dayes and legible 1.'

In the Cambridge Proctors' Books, Feb. 13 is marked non le, and Feb. 21 (which happened in 1557 also to be Sunday) is marked non dis; so the 18th and 20th were at once 'le' and 'dis' days; on the 15th the Royal Visitors summoned the Heads of Colleges into the Schools to hear my Lord Cardynall's letters read; on the 16th there was a mass of the Holy Ghost at St. Mary's, and congregation with admission of questionists in the Schools. On the 17th the Heads met in the Schools to undergo visitatorial inquiry, and 'one of Kateryn Hall entered questions' (a university exercise, of which a reminiscence survives in our Cambridge name 'questionist' applied to a graduate at an early stage in his first degree in arts). The 21st was Sunday, and on Monday the 22nd mass was sung for the good estate of the Queen, and the Vicechancellor 'went to the scholes and herde a pece of Mr Carres lector, betwyxte .ii. and .iii. [of the clocke].' (Documents, pp. 221-6.)

Another curious Cambridge record, Bedell (Matthew) Stokys' Book, written also about 1557², describes the Cambridge Ceremonies in Lent and at other times:—

'The order of the Questionists:—In primis, The Questionists shall gyve the Bedels warnynge upon the Le Daye, that they may proclayme app. p. iv n.). The Cambridge bedells' books, however, spell 'dis' or 'dys' days apparently without such distinction.

1 Lamb, Documents from C. C. C. C., p. 225.

Matt. Stokys was probably inclined to the 'old religion.' He lived, however, well into Elizabethan times, and it is somewhat difficult to determine the date of the compilation of his Book of Ceremonies. He was born at Eton cir. 1514; Scholar of King's, 1531; Fellow, 1534; and B.A. 1536. He held the office of Esquire Bedell in 1557-85, and of Registrary of the University of Cambridge from 1558 until his death in 1591, shortly before which he had the curious picture of academical habits painted, which is still extant at the Registry. The juxtaposition of Common Prayer, 'shall singe the Common Prayers,' in 'Stokys' Book' (pp. ix, xv), along with mention of 'Monkys of Saynt Benedyctys Order,' 'whyte Chanons,' and 'Fryer' in his 'MS.' (pp. xvi, xlviii), high altar, mass, the Extravagant De Vita et Honestate Clericorum, and the embracing 'all the Decrees of the H. Fathers the Roman Pontiffs,' seems to prove that 'Stokys' MS.' book was compiled by him in the time of Hen. VIII, or Mary, if his Book was touched up nuder either of their successors.

What follows is taken from 'Stokys' MS.', which Cole, the antiquary, considered to be later than the foregoing extracts from 'Stokys' Book.' From internal evidence it seems possible that the 'Book' belonged to the time of Edward VI, and the 'MS.' dates in the last year of Queen Mary, as it has vestiges of popish and unreformed usages, &c.

Importance of the Kalendar or Computus.

The kalendar for which the bedell at Cambridge was to receive 3s. 4d. was clearly something beyond an ordinary almanac, for some years earlier (in 1521) John Dorne at Oxford used to sell a 'ciclus, vel alman [a]ck' for 1d., and a 'pronosticon in englis' for 2d. or $3\frac{1}{2}d$., and a sheet almanac 'de vno folio' for 2d, as Mr. Madan's edition of that bookseller's day-book shows us. He had, however, in stock and sold two copies, one on August 3, the other on October 26, a much more expensive work a new 'almanack pro triginta annis,' price 4s. 8d. (see nos. 928, 1396). A reference to our H. Bradshaw Society's Pye or Directorium Sacerdotum (i. p. 19) shows that the editions of that work from 1496 to 1519 contained a cycle of twenty-four years from A.D. 1469 to 1519, and that latest printed edition of the Pye (in 1508) simply added a twenty-fifth year, 1520. It was natural, therefore, that when the booksellers came to 1519 they should procure a new cycle to begin in 1520, and therefore I have conjectured that the expensive 'almanack . . . no.' in Mr. Madan's 928th article, on its first occurrence in Dorne's ledger means a 'novus' (or is it novum?) 'almanack.'

It may have been some such book only in a rather cheaper form that the Cambridge bedell had to provide for each Doctor on his admission. I think it, however, more probable that he took a penny or threepenny cyclus and entered in the margin the days on which the Doctor was to drop his lectures or exercises, in other words the statutable non le and non dis days per anni circulum. In other words the bedell had to provide him an authoritative 'University Kalendar' in some form or other. Of course it is possible that this was written entirely in manuscript, and that the fee of 3s. 4d. was an old charge dating before the employment of printing.

We shall see presently that this very year 1519-20 witnessed a new departure in the provision of an Oxford Computus manualis in which the holidays from lectures and exercises were specified in print. We have the good fortune also to have a manuscript kalendar for private use still extant.

Those who have studied the form or course of university preparation for a degree in arts will recollect that the Oxford student was required to promise on the Gospels that he would devote so many terms, or so many weeks to reading, or hearing in lecture, his specific books and subjects:—

The large Priscian, or The Politics, or X books De animalibus including de progressu et motu.

6 whole weeks, exclusive of holy days.

Priscian de Constructionibus, one terminus anni.

(Six books of Euclid, and at least book iv. of the Topica of Boëthius, in lieu of Rhetorica, are likewise mentioned in MS. D.)

The prescribed study of the Computus, or ecclesiastical kalendar, involving all the lore of the Table to find Easter and other movable feasts, &c. &c., for eight days, not counting holy days, immediately concerns our inquiry on the kalendar.

A Magdalen Man's Kalendar (now at St. John's College).

The library of St. John's College, Oxford, now contains (Cod. MS. 188) an interesting little book which appears to have belonged at one time (in the fifteenth century) to a regent master, or possibly to a bedel, of Magdalen College. It must have been invaluable to a reader, or a student in Arts, for its contents are, in late thirteenth-century writing, written perhaps in the lifetime of Thomas of Newmarket who commented on some of these tracts.

² In his Register of the Univ. of Oxford, i. p. viii, Mr. Boase has drawn our attention to H. O. Coxe's Catalogue of the MSS. of University College, no. xxvi, as illustrating these studies. These MSS. belonging to Coll. Univ. are now in the Bodleian.

De computo, &c., fo. xxiij., by J. Halifax ('de Sacro bosco'). Kalendarium, fos. xl.-xlviij. De musica, &c. &c.

The kalendar which in this MS. accompanies the Computus is in its original form an ordinary early kalendar of Sarum use with a more elaborate apparatus of columns, so as to give the 'concurrentes' and other things important for more elaborate computations than were required by the ordinary churchman. He would be fully content with his Sunday Letter and his Golden Number without wishing to trouble himself over epacts and concurrents. When the book was in use in Oxford (I suppose in the fifteenth century, or later), the owner made a few entries of local interest, &c.

14 Jan. 'In crastino sci hylarij resumptio regen[cium]' and under the line, 'dirige'.

2 July. 'Visitacio eliesbethe †.' added.

20 Oct. 'Dedicatio colegij † Marie Magdalene.'

26 Nov. 'Sci lini.' added.

As to the events here noted, the death of Prince Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, was in 1446. The festival of the Visitation was enjoined by papal authority in 1431, but was not prescribed for England until 1480, when Archbishop Bourchier received from the prolocutor of the Convocation of his province a recommendation submitted to him and to his suffragans that this festival along with St. Audrey's and St. Frideswide's days in October, and St. Osmund's in December, having been approved by the Pope should be recognized in their dioceses 1. As to the 'Dedication of Magdalen College,' on October 20, I do not feel certain as to the year to which reference is here made. The foundation and dedication of the Chapel is said to have been on May 5, 1474, and its completion after 1480. The oath of obedience to the founder's statutes was administered to the society by the second President, August 23, 1480, and in 1482 and 1483 the college was still growing. But it was as early as 1448 that Waynflete had obtained a licence for the foundation for a hall, and it was founded as a college by a charter dated June 12, 14582.

² See Rev. H. A. Wilson's paper in A. Clark's Colleges, pp. 234-5. Mr. Wilson suggests to me that possibly the year to which the reference of October 20 relates may be 1479. Bishop T. Scot or Rotheram, an Oxford founder and benefactor, then Bishop of Lincoln, was translated to York in the following year, when also Magdalen College was transferred from the diocese of Lincoln to that of Winchester.

The Magdalen man's kalendar now at St. John's has another interesting feature. It has entered in the margin the non le, non dis, and le fe days of the Oxford year.

In an appendix at the end of the present volume I propose to give in parallel columns these entries from that MS. (M) with those from the University archives just before the Laudian revision of the Oxford Statutes, and I will add those of an old Cambridge Proctor's Book (Cam.) for the sake of comparison.

For the next column (marked 'E. 1604') my authority is 'Bodl. MS. Top. Oxon. b. 5.' It is a large folio paper MS. of great interest, as Mr. Madan tells me, on account of its giving the Oxford Statutes in their condition in the Jacobean interim between the reformation in religion and the Laudian recension of the Statutes. It was known formerly as MS. E, or 'Arch. Bodl. E,' and was drawn up (partly from MS. A, the Commissary's Book) by, or for, G. Darrell, of All Souls, who was Junior Proctor in 1604. We will indicate this by the letter E^1 . Pages 130, 131 contain simply the numbers of the days of each month with the notes le fe, &c. in their proper places, and nothing more. On fo. 131b is a brief indication of the Oxford terms.

We find a considerable amount of local colour in the list of university festivals, where Oxford (and Cambridge more obviously) diverges from the Sarum kalendar. A comparison of lists suggests either that the Cambridge academical lecture and exercise kalendar was borrowed from Oxford in the thirteenth century, or else that they both were derived from the Paris custom. Possibly a more minute inquiry into the early usages of the University of Paris than I am at present able to undertake might clear up some of the instances which may be found to perplex the reader and to be insufficiently explained by the observations which I have tentatively offered a few lines above.

'Resumptio' and 'Cessatio.'

Of the interruptions in the university studies occasioned by the decease of a gremial, or of a grammar-master or scholar, I hope to speak in a larger work on which I am engaged; and of the extent of vacations, and the resumptio and cessatio, and the shades of meaning which these terms acquired, Dr. Rashdall has already written sufficiently in his Universities of Europe in the Middle Ages, but we must here note his observation that at Paris 'the Feast of St. Remigius

¹ See Wood's Life and Times (Clark's Addenda), iv. 127-8; Anstey, Mun. Acad. i. p. xii.

(Oct. 1)' was always 'treated as the real inauguration of the winter term, when the courses of the year were usually begun,' while 'ordinary lectures' in Arts might be recommenced on the morrow of St. Louis (Aug. 25), and those of Theology and Canon Law might be begun on the morrow of the Exaltation of the Cross (Sept. 15)1. St. Louis (in August) does not occur in our Oxford and Cambridge kalendars, although on November 8 'scī Lodowyci' is interlined by a later hand in the Oxford Commissary's or Chancellor's MS. A, and is likewise indicated in the memorial lines for November 'Omn. anima. que leo, lo-do-wi. marti.' &c. in the Computus manualis ad vsum Oxoniensium of 1519-20. Louis VIII (le Lion) died Nov. 8, 1226. But although the Golden Legend refers to him as 'a kyng ryght cristen' who 'bataylled and foughte ayeynst the heretykes and albygovs (Albigenses) and of the contre of tholouse and extyrped their heresye, & as he retourned in to Fraunce he passyd vnto our Lord,' nevertheless he is hardly likely to have been ranked as sanctus in the Oxford kalendars. I think it more probable that they commemorated his son 'St. Lowys, kynge of Fraunce,' Louis IX, on his accession day in November—possibly because that month was already to a hopeless extent given up to 'playing holidays,'-instead of his depositio on August 25 (1270) which is observed in other ecclesiastical uses. St. Louis was canonized in 1297. In the Oxford Computus manualis he is merely named, but no holiday is indicated on that day. In any case it is a curious point of contact between Paris and thirteenthcentury Oxford. Possibly the entry was made for the sake of the scholars of the French 'Nation' there, as they would keep it with festivities, as the Irish did St. Patrick's day and the Welsh St. David's.

Dr. Rashdall continues:—'Only a few days' holiday is officially recognized [at Paris] at Christmas and Easter, and even in the Long Vacation cursory lectures might be delivered except upon certain festivals. Numerous festivals in term-time were observed by a total suspension of Lectures, or by a suspension of ordinary Lectures only².'

Academic terminology is very apt to shift its meaning. 'Commem.' at Oxford, and 'Commencement' and 'Tripos' at Cambridge, have put into the background, and almost forgotten, the circumstances of their etymology. So in early days Resumptio came to indicate at Paris a public discourse or disputation delivered before the Faculty by a new Master Regent in Theology at the opening of the academical year¹. Rather later, in the fifteenth century, the word conveyed to younger students the idea of a small class at which they were to be examined upon their studies by the lecturer, or some other Master or Bachelor, an exercise of constant occurrence, like the recitatio at Oxford, or the repetitio of Bologna and King's College, Cambridge². However in the kalendars before us Resumptio regencium merely indicates the date for the formal beginning of terminal or yearly lecture courses.

Similarly the word cessatio, in the early days of University history, indicated not merely the regular dates for ending the more formal courses of lectures by the Regent Masters. It was applied also to the privilege which existed at Paris before any university was incorporated in England, and apparently before 1180, whereby the Masters were authorized (by Louis VII, as it is said) to have a cessacio, that is, to suspend their lectures, in case an outrage had been committed upon any of their body or of their students 3. Such an intellectual interdict was imposed by the University of Paris as their constitutional method of protesting and calling for redress when some of Queen Blanche's soldiers massacred some of the young students at their games after a Town and Gown riot in the Bourg of S. Marcel during the carnival of 1228-94.

That cessacio proving ineffectual, the Masters determined to dissolve the University of Paris for a term of years, a measure which resulted in all probability in an addition to the number of students both at Oxford and Cambridge about 1229, as well as to the growth of the School of the Dominicans who remained at Paris when the secular students were dispersed 5. When similar troubles arose at the carnival of 1252-3, two Dominican Doctors and one Franciscan refused to take notice of the 'cessation' proclaimed by the University, and when the affair was settled the two Dominicans at least were excluded from the consortium of Masters; and attendance at their lectures was prohibited, while the University thenceforward prescribed as a test an oath which required each Master on admission to a faculty to swear, that (among other matters of conformity) he would obey the injunction if ever a 'cessation' should be voted by the College of Masters 6. In the fifteenth century recourse to 'Cessation from Sermons and Lectures' was still had, and not always in extreme cases only¹, until at last the right of the University of Paris to order an extraordinary cessation was abolished in the first year of Louis XII in 1499. Of course the cessacio which appears in our kalendars is not the record of some extraordinary event like the suspendium clericorum in past time, but the entry of the fixed date at which the Masters' lecture-engagements for the year or term would cease.

University College Kalendar.

It does not very often happen that at the present day in England a mediaeval service-book or kalendar is still found in the same place where it was formerly in use. About 1850 my father became vicar of Stanford-in-the-Vale². It was only a year or two before his institution that Dr. Rock had found in the hands of one of the churchwardens there, and purchased from him, a Latin service-book which had been in use in the parish church. But in most cases such books have passed from their original habitat to public or private collections. York and Durham, Westminster and Salisbury still retain one or more of their old service-books. It was perhaps due to the devotion of Dr. Caius that his college library still contains a Sarum breviary (cod. 394) with that curious inscription which begins

'Wher so ever y be come over all
I belonge to the Chapell of gunvylle hall:
He shal be cursed by the grete sentens
That felonously faryth and berith me thens.' &c.

We have already described a kalendar which once belonged to a Magdalen man at Oxford and is now at the College of St. John Baptist (MS. 188). Queen's College is so fortunate as to retain still its martyrology, and to have at present a Provost who is editing the college obit-kalendar which is prefixed to it. University College has lost the bulk of its noble mass-book; but a fragment of it was preserved, and is now safe in Bodley's Library (Coll. Univ. MS. B. 178).

This fragment consists of eight leaves of what must have been once a magnificent folio MS. on vellum, formerly in the Chapel of University College. What now remains is:—

Lf. 1. The rubric and form of Blessing Holy Water, answering to cols. 29-32 of the Burntisland reprint of Missale Sarum, 1861-83; but the rubric is more like that of the Sarum Graduale cited in the foot-notes on those pages. It is still nearer, I believe, to the printed Sarum Processionale of 1517. (See Henderson's edition of the Processionals of (1502 and) 1508, pp. 1, 2 notes.) It is nearest of all in some of its phrases to the Salisbury Cathedral fifteenth-century MS. Procession-Book (MS. 148), ed. Camb. 1901, pp. 18-20.

The fragment begins Omnibus dominicis per annum, and fol. 1 b ends, 'in ramis palmarum, cum Gloria Patri, Sicut erat.'

Ll. 2-7 are occupied by the kalendar, in which gold, red, blue, violet, and black are used. It may have been written about the year 1400.

Lf. 8, the last which remains, gives a portion of the missal services from the Offertorium on the Ember Wednesday mass in the fourth week of Advent down to the words 'et dabo tibi thesauros absconditos, et archana [secretorum reuelabo]' in the fourth prophetic lection, from Isaiah (xlv. 1–8), on the Ember Saturday. This corresponds with (the lower part of) col. 31–col. 36, line 12, in the Missale Sarum reprint. Probably the first and last leaves were torn away from the missal as a sort of cover to the kalendar which was preserved for the sake of its special entries when the Latin service was abolished and the books themselves were considered to be not only obsolete but pernicious relics of superstition.

In the kalendar the letter 'D' is used to mark the Egyptian or 'evil' unlucky days. We find Hic mutantur concurrentes on March 1; 'Hic mutantur indicciones,' Sept. 24; 'Yemps oritur,' Nov. 24, St. Chrysogonus' day. It was in other respects of the usual Sarum text in its original condition. The local entries are these:—

cation of Univ. Coll. chapel.]—(ix lec.)

¹ St. Cuthbert's Day is marked as a feast of nine lessons in Sarum Use, but it would rank locally as a principale duplex wherever it might chance to be the festum tituli Sancti loci. Frere's Use of Sarum, i. 29.

The Kalendar of Oriel College.

One more college kalendar ought to be mentioned, that which is prefixed to the Register of the Muniments of Oriel College, compiled in 13973. It is now in the British Museum (Lansdowne MS. 386). A small impression of a choice edition of this old Oriel kalendar by C. L. Shadwell, D.C.L. (formerly Fellow of the College) is dated 'Frewin Hall, I June, 1899,' and a copy of this interesting and scarce folio of ii+20 pages has been generously presented by him to the Cambridge University Library with courteous permission for me to use it on its way thither.

Like the University College Missal kalendar, the Oriel Register kalendar has a simple Sarum basis. It contains the following domestic entries in addition. The references to 'surplice days' will be observed.

For the account of the Oriel kalender I am indebted to Dr. Shadwell's private print of it; I have ventured to expand some of the contractions of the MS., and to incorporate his dates.

1383. (Wilkins, Concilia, iii. 19, 178-9.)

² This Feast of the Dedication of St. Mary's Church, Oxford, in October, is entered in this kalendar some considerable time after the book was originally written. Dr. Shadwell tells us that there can be no question that the other dedication day, viz. July 27, lit. dom. E., was commonly observed as St. Mary's Dedication at Oriel in the fifteenth century, as it was in the University generally. (See the Chancellor's Book, MS. A. Archiv.) July 27 was doubtless the original, or early, dedication. (Shadwell, Calendar of Oriel College, 1899, p. 18.) How then are we to account for this entry of the first Sunday in October as the day to be observed at a later period? Of course there may have been some fresh dedication of the church, after a desecration, about the beginning of the sixteenth century. But, if the handwriting of the inserted entry can be dated so low, I should be inclined to attribute it to the influence of an Act of King Henry VIII, which, in 1536, abolished the various old dedication anniversaries throughout the kingdom, and attempted to establish one uniform 'Feast Sunday' for local observance in all parishes. A provincial Synod, July 19, 1536, gave a similar direction (Wilkins, Concilia, iii. 824, 827). St. Paul's, and London generally, had adopted October 3 as a dedication

The Bedel's Book (Bodl. 8vo, Rawl. 662).

We have already mentioned the Oxford Bedel's book which has been for some centuries in the Bodleian Library (8vo, Rawl. 662) in an early sixteenth-century binding. It contains two little printed pieces and a supplement of sixteenth-century manuscript, and was evidently the constant companion of a Bedel in the early years of King Henry VIII, before the Divorce of 1533, as well as afterwards.

The printed pieces are:-

(a) A small 8vo kalendar of eight leaves (♣ i—♣ 8), i. e. sig. ♣ from some little Sarum portos or breviary 2, containing in small gothic letter the Tabula festorum mobilium and canon festorum, the Sarum perpetual almanack, and the little treatise De laude virtule et efficacia psalmorum 3, which commonly together make up the kalendar sheet in Sarum date as early as 1523 (ibid. iii. 702). In the kalendar of our Sarum Breviary (mense Octob.) we have noted such an entry made in ink, at the top of the page, in the copy of the 1531 folio at Exeter College (172, G. 6).

³ See Brev. Sarum, ed. Cantab. 1880, fasc. II. pp. xxiii, xxiv.

breviaries of (e.g.) the first quarter of the sixteenth century. In the margin of the kalendar the university holidays are entered.

Next there is (b) a supply of fifty leaves of writing-paper on which the Bedel has made various entries for his own convenience, viz. forms for bidding bedes on certain commemorations. Notes on the Academic Kalendar, and Formulae at creation, so far as they concerned his own office—

(c) Fratris Hieronymi Sauonaroli de Ferarijs ordinis predicatorum expositio in psalmos Miserere &c.¹ (printed).

Then follow, on three fly-leaves, some more manuscript entries, viz. (d) Table of fees chargeable for degrees, and (e) Memoranda of payments received by the Bedel from persons graduating.

We will give here such portions of the little book as concern the history of Oxford.

¹ Editions of this work, printed soon after 1500, are found in Lambeth Palace Library:—one, ex prelo Ascensiano (xviii. 14, 29, 8°. 2.). Another, larger size (xxviii. 5, 2, 8°. 5.), besides several versions of it in English.

[The kalendar portion was transcribed by Miss A. F. Parker, in September, 1902: the Bedel's MS. notes are in square brackets.]

* * For twenty-five years I had been perplexed by the two lines which appear near the bottom of the next page, among other places,— 'Quinque bis, inde dias, bis septem,' &c. But Dr. Magrath, the Provost of Queen's, has now happily discovered their interpretation, out of the ancient Liber Obitalis of his college (mense Ianuarii), where a rule to the following effect is given:-

And if this reckoning brings you to a Sunday, that will be the day itself required.

The reader will be able to ascertain, from pp. 21, 22, 60-3, the names of the persons for whose souls the Dirge was to be performed at the places in the kalendar where the Bedel has written 'dirige' (e. g. at Jan. 21st and 24th).

2 misa (Nov. 16) probably marks the mass for Humfry and Lewis Charleton.

 - ¹ Ela (countess of Warwick by her first marriage) was daughter of the noble and devout Ela, countess of Salisbury, foundress of Lacock and Hinton. The conntess of Warwick herself founded a chantry at Godstow. Some have thought that her father, W. Longespée, was son of Fair Rosamnnd, as undoubtedly he was of King Henry II. Ela was buried at Osney Abbey, and is said to have lived in her widowhood at Heddington. She was a benefactress to Merton, and was foundress of a cista or loan fund, the 'Warwick Chest,' to which a curator was appointed every winter. She held the manor of Hook Norton, Oxfordshire, by grand serjeantry, claiming to carve before the King, her cousin, in hall on Christmas Day, and receiving the knife for her fee. (Placit. 13 Edw. I.) [DE FEODIS TABULA.]

Here follows on pp. 27-36 a table of Fees for Degrees in Civil Law, Canon Law, for Inceptors who can expend forty pounds per annum clear.

These will be found printed from Hearne's Diaries, vol. lxix. p. 23 foll., in Hearne's Collections, vi. pp. 272-4.

In the Bedel's Book (8º Rawl. 662), pp. 37-9 remain blank.

Pages 40, 41 are occupied with musical staves, for three voices, for the ascending and descending hexachord, vt.. re me fa sol la la sol fa mi re vt re mi. I do not know whether there was any musical test ever applied at Oxford as there used to be under the Founder's Statutes at Winchester College. When the late Bishop of St. Andrews became 'Hostiarius' or Second Master there in 1835, he found it was the custom for boys on admission—even if they could sing well—to cover the deficiencies of less gifted schoolfellows to reply to the question put by the Warden 'Can you sing?' simply by saying a verse of the 'Old Hundredth' Psalm in an ordinary voice. At Cambridge, an M.A. of King's used to read Greek to a Bedell, and a member of any other college was examined in Greek by a Bedell. See Gunning's Ceremonies, pp. 168, 171, 173. Musick was one of the Liberal Arts.

8º Rawl. 662.7

Then follow, on pp. 42-5, in a roman hand of the sixteenth century.

FORMVLE.

On admission of a Doctor.

Summons to mass for Q. Eleanor. (See above, Nov. 29.)

Summons to mass for Walter Neel, lord of Asshendon, brother J. de Scopeya (Shepey), prior of Rochester.

'quorum animabus propicietur Deus!'

The like for K. Edward III, and Thomas, duke of Oxford. Also for K. Henry IV. These will be found printed at length in Hearne's Collections, vi. pp. 274-5.

662, p. 45.

* 80 Rawl. * A D conuocacionem omnes doctores, magistri regentes et non regentes hora 2ª pomeridiana post pulsacionem parue campane per fidem.

Pages 46-50 still remain blank.

Next to them is bound up Savonarola's Exposition of the Psalms, Miserere, &c., printed in gothic letter.

And on the fly-leaves at the end of it occur entries of Fees at Degrees and the Bedel's Receipts from Inceptors, &c., in the years 1566 and 1567.

1 cullet: or 'colet,' 'cumulatio,' an annual or terminal fee paid to the bedells. See Register of the Univ. of Oxford (ed. Clark), ii. pp. 64, 108-9, 218-33, 458. 'Cumulatio' is used as equivalent to the payment by a grand-compounder, 'cumulatus,' ii. 64 n.

² enteryng of senttans: the intratio lecturae [alicuius] libri Sententiarum [Petri Lombardi] was required of Inceptors in Theology. Mun. Acad. (ii.) 295. This was changed at the Reformation into lectio alicuius epistolarum Diui Pauli (Reg. Univ. ii. 136 n.).

3 yf he beny: 'si sit beneficiatus.'

hys vyspers: 'in vesperiis comitiorum,' i. e. the Saturday before the Act, on both of which occasions Disputations of Inceptors were held, Reg. Univ. ii. 82, 169.

⁵ This and the following names probably belonged to the 'clericus domini doctoris,' the bell-ringer ('pulsatori campanarum'), and the bedels of the faculty. J. Shewsmith was Clericus Univ. in 1565 (Reg. Univ. ii. 262). W. Gilbert, superior bedel of arts, 1553-73; Matt. Crosse, inferior bedel of theology, 1607, d. 1656 (?); J. Toldervey, inferior bedel, first of theology, 1540, then of arts, 1541-67, his name being very variously spelt, Reg. Univ. iv. 414, index; Nic. Woodson, superior bedel of theology, 1559, died of the pestilence in 1571. See Reg. Univ. ii. pp. 257-60.

Miss A. F. Parker (who has kindly supplied a portion of these extracts) notes some fragmentary entries on p. 140 of the Bedell's Book, part being torn away. They probably refer to fees paid to the Bedel about 1567.

Dr. Harreys (not identified). No mention seems to be made of Dr. Ro. Huycke,

M.A., fellow of Merton, M.D. Camb., physician to Q. Elizabeth, incorp. Sept. 6, 1566.

Ri. Slithurst, practised medicine at St. Peter's-in-the-East. He was commanded to prepare to dispute in Physick at Q. Elizabeth's visit in 1566. Wood-Bliss, Fasti, i. 176 n.

E. Attslow, fellow of New College, M.D., Aug. 27, 1566.

4 Roger Gifford, All Souls, M.D., Aug. 30, 1566.

H. 'Berkley,' New College, D.C.L., April 19, 1567. ('Barckley,' or 'Bartlei.')

W. Constantine, All Souls, D.C.L., April 21, 1567.

J. Belly, provost of Oriel, D.C.L., July 4, 1567.

Ro. Leech, Ch. Ch., D.C.L., July 7, 1567.
 T. Sammon, All Souls, D.C.L., July 4, 1567.

12 There was one J. Pricharte, Uprichard (Aprichard), B.C.L., in 1560.

15 John Constantine took his M.A. degree in 1567, and William Constantine, of All Souls, was D.C.L. in the same year. The reference is (perhaps) to the latter.

14 Lawrence Twyne, of All Souls, B.C.L., 1564; or Thomas Twyne, of Corpus (poet and almanac-maker of 'prognosticacions'), M.A., 1568, who subsequently studied medicine at Cambridge, where he took the degree of M.D. in 1580.

Was this Nicholas Gibbard (or Gibbert), M.A., 1566, M.D., 1571, or W. Gilbert, the superior bedel?

THREE OXFORD KALENDARS

FROM THE

COMMISSARY'S AND PROCTORS' BOOKS OF THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY

 MS. A, the Chancellor's or Commissary's Book, cir. 1410.

MS. B, the Southern (or Senior) Proctor's Book, A.D. 1477.

MS. C, the Junior (or Northern) Proctor's Book, A.D. 1407.

MS. A is first printed consecutively throughout on pp. 68-79. This is followed by MSS. C and B, which stand on alternate pages, the one opposite to the other.

The places where passages in MS. A have been obliterated are marked thus by dots. Some notes are given from the earlier (fourteenth-century) M S T.

We owe the revision of these pages to Mr. C. L. Stainer.

^{&#}x27;[It was evidently intended to write this series of memorial lines for all the months, to show in each which two days (counting the former from the beginning and the latter backwards from the end of each month) were 'dies malae' or 'Egyptiacae,' unlucky for taking physic, baths, blood-letting, or other serious undertakings. But as this Kalendar (in MS. A) is drawn up in double columns the lines for January, May and July have chanced to be ousted I insert these in brackets. Jan. 25, marginal note:—Missa. [In the above table the whole of the entries in columns four and five are one place too high. To correct it, therefore, the first entry should run '[1] xix. g. KL. Iulius,' and the last entry i KL. should be removed. The result of this error has been that A. Wood has been misled into giving the old Dedication Day of St. Mary's Church as June (he meant to say fully) 26th, whereas it really belongs to July 27th. Dr. Shadwell explains this in his Oriel Calendar. There are passages blotted out in the margin about the 4th, 7th, 11th, 26th and 27th, and at the foot of the column. I feel some doubt as to the subject of these obliterated notes. July 6. 'Missa de cessacione de trinitate,' 7.]

[There is an obliteration in the lower margin, but as the page is in double columns it is quite possible that the blackened note related to the companion month on this page, viz. [The Transfiguration August 6, and 'Nominis Iesu' August 7, are not given in the MSS. except by a much later (seventeenth-century) hand in B. These festivals had been instituted in 1457, but were not prescribed in England until 1480.

August 11. The name of St. Tiburcius has been erased and subsequently restored.]

[Oct. 2, Leonardi has been altered by a later hand to leogarij. This is St. Ludger's day, St. Leonard's being on Nov. 6th. Oct. 9 and 18, marginal notes on left hand have been blotted out.

Oct. 9. There is a note in the margin:—'Statut' in fine mensis legend.' ñ. fo. 57.'

In Symonis festo milleno C. quater anno.']

Although the College missals in use at Oxford were in many instances of Sarum Use, and students found that the Sarum Kalendar answered their purposes sufficiently as regarded the names of the Saints commemorated, and the like, the books provided for University officials had some peculiarities, over and above the additional entry of holidays from lectures and exercises, and the obsequies and commemorations of benefactors and other worthies.

The Missa Burgensium (cf. MS.A*) on St. Scholastica's day (Feb. 10) in memory of the sad transaction in 1354, when certain scholars were slain after an affray with the townsmen, was of course of local interest.

We find, marked in the Oxford Kalendar, twenty holy days which have no place in the ordinary Sarum books.

Foremost among these are the 'Invention' and 'Translation' of the local virgin saint, Frideswyde, on May 15 (A^*) , and Feb. 12 (A). Even her 'Depositio' on Oct. 19 (A) was not generally established in other places in England when in 1480 the prolocutor of the Southern Convocation petitioned the primate (Cardinal Bourchier) to enjoin this along with two or three other festivals which had not as yet been observed in this country, notwithstanding that they had received papal recognition some time previously 1.

Several other 'non-Sarum' names appear:-

Antony of Padua (June 13), Osithe (June 3), Peter of Milan (April 29) A, Botulph (June 17), Wilfrid (Oct. 12), and William of York (June 8) A, names well known in Lincoln or York Use, and therefore likely enough to have been observed in Oxford somewhat ostentatiously by 'Northern' scholars. St. Bertelin or Bettelin of Stafford appears (at the ninth day of September) in the margin of the Bedel's book at a later date.

Though Irishmen, Welsh, and Scots were not looked upon with favour at Oxford 2, St. Patrick's name was duly entered in the kalendar on March 17, as well as those of the other national patrons recognized in Sarum Use. It became necessary, however, to restrain the custom of students inviting their 'national' comrades from other parishes to attend noisy festivities on their special holy days, and it was thought desirable to bind the Grammar masters and students to keep uniformity in observing holy days according to their common kalendar. Exception only was made in favour of each man's parish feast in which he himself was allowed to join 3.

To scholastic and monastic influences we may attribute the appearance of such entries in the Oxford kalendars as St. Thomas Aquinas (March 7) A*, and the Translation of St. Dominic (May 24), and the two days of St. Francis (May 25, ?transl.; and Oct. 4). We may notice also the Translation of St. Eloy (Dec. 1), St. German (May 21), Juliana (Feb. 23), Mildred (July 13) A*. Also St. Euphemia on April 13. This last named is found likewise in Winchester books. The Depositio S. Osmundi is a later insertion in A, that saint not having been canonized until 1456. His festival was one of those for the !full recognition of which the Convocation of Canterbury petitioned Cardinal Archbishop Bourchier in 1480.

ON THE 'COMPUTUS MANUALIS IN USUM OXONIENSIUM'

WE have seen how students of arts and medicine sometimes had a university kalendar bound up with their textbooks as a convenient manual in the thirteenth century or later ¹. We observed also that the Computus or Kalendar with the Table to find Moveable Feasts, &c., had a statutable place in the curriculum of Arts ².

Of the 'Libellus Sophistarum.'

It was therefore only natural that there should be a textbook for its study.

Students, who have had larger opportunities for handling sixteenth-century books than I have, may be able to give a better account of the early productions of the University. I confess that it was with feelings of the greatest interest that I opened, quite recently, a little quarto volume in the Palace Library at Lambeth (xxiii. 7. 24), which seemed to me to contain in embryo those great foundations the Oxford Clarendon and the Cambridge University Pitt Presses.

Two little works are bound together in this volume, the one printed in 1523 (June 4), the other in 1530 (July 16). Both are the work of Caxton's foreman and successor Wynkyn de Worde, then printing in the parish of St. Bride's at the sign of 'the Sun' in Fleet Street, London. I was familiar with his edition of schoolbooks, Sum es fui, &c., and similar works of Stanbrig and of Robert Whitinton, laureatus Oxon., Lichfeldiensis grammatices magister, et protovates Anglie, for there is in the Vicar's library at St. Mary's, Marlborough, a fine collection of these little pieces, ranging from 1520 to 1532. But (though I had read of them) I had never seen these publications for students in our two Universities. They are—

- (1) 'Libellus Zophistarū ad bsum Cātibriaien.'
- (2) ' Lihellus Sophistaru ad bsu Gxonien.'

Each of them has a woodcut representing a master seated at his desk with three pupils before him. The Cambridge edition has its short title enclosed in a ribbon, or scroll, and the woodcut (Dibdin, i. p. l.) repeated on the reverse page, and the sheets (A-K*, L*) signed 'Sophis. Canti.' The Oxford copy runs only to K*. Of the latter there is an earlier copy in the Bodleian (8° O. 4. Art.) 1512 (Aug. 12) of the same bulk.

The two works have a certain family likeness, but with some of the examples different, and with just that amount of dissimilarity which we might expect to find between (say) a Rugby and a Cheltenham grammar.

On sig. F. i. (verso) we find in the Cambridge book Consequentie allyngton . . . 'Contra hunc textum ab Aristotele primo periarmeniarum edit., de nulla vna re simul dicantur contradictoria incomplexa, &c., sic arguitur,' &c. &c. Robert Alington was scholar of Queen's and Fellow of New College and Chancellor of the University in 1394. The reference is to the peri hermeneias. I suppose the printed books (if they did not incorporate them) took the place of such MSS. as Sophismata de equivocis, T. Moston (Magd. Coll. cod. xcii) and the Sophismata of W. Strode (Oriel, cod. xxxiii. p. 282) who I suppose was Chaucer's 'philosophical Strode' (Troilus and Criseyde, li. 1857), whom about 1383 he coupled with 'moral Gower,' but who is named 'Ralph' Strode by Tanner (Biblioth. Brit. p. 697).

The Libellus Sophistarum is said by Dibdin (ii. 152) to have been printed in vsum Cantibrigieñ in 1510, 1525, and some other year unknown. Copies of these are to be found in existence as follows:—

1510. Sept. 7, is in Cambridge University Library, Hh. 14. 731.

1524. June 4, is in Lambeth Palace Library, xxiii. 7. 24.

That in vsum Oxonieñ:

? 1515. (imperfect), is in the British Museum, C. 37. c. 44.

1524. Pynson, mentioned by Dibdin from Ames and Herbert.

1530. July 16, W. de Worde, in Lambeth Palace Library, xxiii. 7. 24.2

As the Libellus Sophistarum was intended to aid the student in Arts with his Dialectic, so the Compotus Manualis was designed to help him over his 'Computus,' to which he had solemnly sworn to devote eight whole days of lectures.² I am not sure that we can altogether vindicate it from being an early Oxford 'cram' book, and the systematic use of the diagrams of the palms of the hands (whence I suppose the title Manualis was derived) must have sorely tempted the mediaeval

Mr. Bouncer to anticipate the methods of Mr. A. C. Hilton's Heathen Pass-ee at Cambridge ¹.

We will now give the text of the Oxford *Computus*², adding such elucidations as are within our power.

1 The Light Green, ii. p. 8 (1872).

We have mentioned one or two instances of miscellaneous tracts gathered in one volume in old times for the use of our University students or teachers. (See pp. 18, 31, above.) No. 70 among the volumes given by T. Markaunt about 1439 to the students of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, is an excellent example of such a collection. It cost 6s. 8d., and contained

(2) Algorismus de minuciis [J. de Sacrobosco, or Halifax, on fractions].

(3) Compotus ecclesiasticus. [Probably by J. de Sacrobosco. T. of Newmarket wrote a prose comment. It was originally calculated for 1244-56.]

(4) Tractatus de spera. [Probably by J. de Sacrobosco, De Sphera.]

(5) Theorica planetarum.

(6) Musica Boecii abbreniata.

(7) Sufficiencia musice organice. [By J. de Muris, MS. Bodl. Digby, 168.]

(8) Musica Boecii abbreuiata per Iohannem de muris. [Halliwell mentions that there is a copy of J. de Muris (who wrote circ. 1321-45) in Brit. Mus. Lansdowne MS. 762.]

(9) Alius tractatus de discantura. [This MS. volume is lost, but Dr. M. R. James supplies the incipit of the second and penultimate folios 'dicitur et albedinem,' and 'vel valorem pro breue.']

The Compotus verses, with prose comment by Thomas of Newmarket, M.A., Cantab., and some of the other treatises just mentioned, are found in the Peterhouse MS. 184=1.8.8*. See also MS. Bodl. Digby, 81. This compotus, beginning 'Omnium philosophorum discretissimi,' is (says Dr. M. R. James) a comment on the Algorismus of Dionysius Abbas, Peterhouse MSS. p. 216. How large was the number of copies of the Compotus, and of the treatises thereon, may be gathered from Dr. James's account of the Ancient Libraries of Canterbury and Dover (Camb. 1903). Thus I note, on a hasty search, in the Catalogue of Ch. Ch. Cant. nos. 92, 98, 285-90, 957, 1426 and 1605 (see also Bodl. Digby, 28). Among books which were at Canterbury College, Oxford (A.D. 1524), no. 251 was Compotus Geraldi. In the Catalogue of St. Augustine's, Cant., nos. 1127-34, 1140, 1142, 1147, 1153-7, 1167, 1170, 1429, 1456 (prose and verse), 1563, and 1594. In the Catalogue of Dover Priory, A.D. 1389, nos. 124, 324; II. 334, 395 (massa compoti), 411 (ars calculatoria), and 442 (comp. eccles. glosatus). Out of this list Dr. James had identified a few as still extant. From Ch. Ch. Cant. no. 287 = ? Brit. Mus. Cotton Calig. A. xv (part 2). From St. Aug. Cant. ON THE FRONTISPIECE TO THE OXFORD 'COMPOTUS MANUALIS' OF

1519-20

THIS woodcut seems to me to represent a young Master of Arts (perhaps Magister Anianus the author of the text, or a reader of the text and gloss in lecture). He wears a rich figured gown or tabard, with hood or tippet and laureated cap, and is delivering his lecture from an open book which rests upon a knee-table or desk, which might well be the envy of modern students for its drawers, cupboards, and accommodation for a book of reference on a pupitre on either side, besides the one in front of him. I should have been inclined to suggest that the scene intended is the Art Schools at Oxford; but Dr. Hastings Rashdall has assured me that the rod or birch which he holds as a mere emblem in his left hand 'lightly like a flower'-rather than with the grasp of a Busby, a Udal, or an Orbilius, must indicate that the place represented is the lecture-room within his hall or college. A more awe-inspiring sculica or tause, loaded with a bulla of leather (if not of lead) reposes in reserve beneath his penknife to his right 1. Two students drawn on a scale of humble diminution are writing at desks or lecterns revolving on their pillars. Below these sit five others on a long form or stone seat, which has a front of carved diaper pattern, or of textile drapery. Above the end of the seat hangs what may be meant for a bag of books or papers. That the total number of students, like that of the clasped tomes above the lecturer's head, is seven, may imply an allusion to the seven liberal arts of the trivium and quadrivium, indicated in the memorial lines :-

'Gram: loquitur; Dia: vera docet; Rhet: verba colorat; Mus: canit; Ar: numerat; Géo: ponderat; Ast: colit astra.'

A lamp, an hour-glass, a clock striking on a bell—with pendent weights, together with terrestrial and celestial globes, form at once the natural furniture of the room and an emblematic suggestion of the teacher's subject the computus or calculation of the kalendar. The rod has ten twigs; our 'bibling-rod' at Winchester had only four.

As to the wreath of bay Dr. Rashdall writes to us:—'Poets and teachers of Grammar or Rhetoric¹ were certainly created Poets Laureates and invested with the Laurea at Oxford and Cambridge. "The custom of laureating poets perhaps originated in Italy. We hear of it at Padua in the fourteenth century. There is a letter of Petrarch, where the poet declares that he received invitations on one and the same day, ad percipiendam lauream poeticam, from Rome and from the Chancellor of Paris. Only the first invitation was accepted²." But there were other occasions on which other graduates wore wreaths³: so I should not be too confident that the schoolmaster in the picture was a laureate . . . schoolmasters might be Masters of Arts or Masters of Grammar; but as the natural teacher of Computus would be a Master of Arts, I think it would be the safest way to describe him as such.' (New College, Oxford. May 3, 1903.)

The following interesting comment has been kindly communicated by Dr. Edwin C. Clark, Regius Professor of Laws at Cambridge, whose paper on English Academical Costume (Mediæval) appeared in the Archæological Journal, vol. L. 73-207. (Reprinted, W. Pollard, 8vo, Exeter, 1894.)

THIS is a very interesting and suggestive representation of a quasi-doctorate in Arts.

That the Compotus was an Arts subject I am informed by Mr. Wordsworth, and should also infer from the plate itself. That a doctorate, or quasi-doctorate, was intended I conclude from the costume of the figure. This is, in order of putting on, a cassock, tabard or sleeved cope, a tippet, and, on the head, a pileus of dignity.

² Universities of Europe, Rashdall, 1895, II. ii, where the references are given. ⁶ Bernard Andrew, poet laureate, received a royal annuity in 1486 on account of his teaching at Oxford and elsewhere.' (loc. cit.) John Skelton, the poet previously laureated at Oxford, and beyond the seas, was licensed to wear the bay at Cambridge also in 1493. 'Rob. Whitinton Lichfeldiensis,' of whose grammatical works there is a good collection at St. Mary's, Marlborough, is described circ. 1519-21 (exactly the period of our Compotus) as 'grammatices magister et protovates Anglie, in florentissima Oxoniensi academia laureatus.'

³ Bachelors of other faculties wore floral wreaths at the Festivities of the Act. Cains, Hist. Cantabr. p. 122. Canons of St. Paul's wore wreaths of roses in 1405. Wharton, De Episc. Lond. p. 150.

The other articles of dress are found with the lower degrees, in Arts as well as in the specially so-called Faculties.

The rod (an unmistakeable birch) is rather the sign of a Master in Grammar. But the pileus of dignity, in Academical Costume, belongs properly to the Doctorate, a degree regularly confined to the three Faculties of Divinity, Law, and Medicine.

In the earlier part of the sixteenth century a short-lived attempt was made to erect a kind of Humanist Faculty, after the pattern of the older three. This attempt took its most definite form in the Collegium poetarum et mathematicorum started by the Emperor Maximilian at Vienna in 1501. The style of the academical degree was to be poeta laureatus, but the insignia distinctly followed those of the Doctorate, including the Hat of Dignity, and adding thereto a wreath of laurel. My authority for the above statement is the seventh volume of the Monographien zur deutschen Kulturgeschichte, p. 65, where will be found a copy of Durer's woodcut (now at Berlin) representing these insignia as conferred upon the Humanist Conrad Celtis, somewhat earlier (by Maximilian's father, Frederick III). The same work contains (at p. 68) a likeness of the same Celtis (from a woodcut of Burgkmair's), which resembles the figure in the Compotus in every respect-tippet, sleeved under-dress, laureated hat-except the birch rod. I am not sufficiently acquainted with the history of Oxford University to say whether there was any English attempt to set up a sort of Arts Faculty in the beginning of the sixteenth century. But it certainly would seem as if the printer of the Compotus had in view some of the facts or pictorial representations to which I have referred.

THE Compotus manualis cum commento was printed at least thirty times between 1486 and 1529. It consists of a metrical text, ascribed in several editions to 'Magister Anianus' a Latin poet and astronomer of the fifteenth century,' and runs to upwards of 250 Latin hexameter lines. It treats of (1) the Solar Cycle, (2) the Lunar Cycle, (3) the Moveable and Immoveable Festivals, and (4) the Seasons. Under these four headings an account is given of (1) Leap year, the planets, the signs of the zodiac, and the order of holy days fixed in the kalendar, expressed in the memorial lines Ci-si-o Ia-nus, &c., (2) the saltus lunae, the epacts, regulares, and embolismal years, (3) the claves festorum, (4) the terms and quarters of the year, vigils, perilous (or 'Egyptian') days, and litterae tabulares.

At the end are commonly added six lines 'in commendation of the work,' viz.

'Que vix antiqui . . . brevi compendio et arte.'

The text is usually divided into thirty-four paragraphs of from two to eighteen lines. To each paragraph of the text a prose gloss or comment is subjoined or prefixed in most of the editions, although not in the one printed at Oxford.

From 1490 onwards the editions include from four to eight diagrams of open or closed hands, with words, letters, or syllables inscribed on the several joints (iuncturae) of each finger, as is stated in the title of the quarto just mentioned, viz.

'Liber 2 qui Compotus inscribitur: vna cum figuris et manibus necessariis tam in suis locis quam in fine libri positis Incipit feliciter. Lux orta est iusto 3. Psalmista 4 Ista verba... Dicitur autem athomus ab a quod est sine, et Thomos quod est diuisio quasi sine diuisione.

Quoniam in magno compoto tradite sunt multe regule et diuerse a magistro Alexandro de villa dei... Patet ergo quod in quolibet digito sunt septem iuncture excepto pollice, in quo solum sunt quinque: nec plures nec pauciores.'

The text then begins:

'Compotus est talis . . . vna dies superaddi.'

Hain (*2195-6) gives the name in the form 'Avianus.'

⁴ Ps. xcvi. Vulg. (= xcvii.), 11.

² The title in 1488 is 'Compotus manualis magistri aniani + metricus cum commento et algorismus.'

³ This is called in 1488 'Prologus in librum aniani, qui compotus nuncupatur.'

PRINTED EDITIONS OF 'COMPUTUS MANUALIS' 115

The commendatory verses are eleven in number 'Que vix antiqui . . .

. . . Et qui portat aquam puer vrniger: ét duo pisces 1.'

Then a kalendar of tabular letters, golden numbers, &c., with an explanation thereof, ending 'que littera erit dominicalis pro predictis vltimis festis mobilibus.' 'Registrum.'

'Liber compoti cum commento finit feliciter.

Impressus Lugduni per Iohannem de Prato. Anno domini. M. ccc. xc. die xxiiii. Ianuarii.'

The Roman 4to edition of 1493 has a woodcut on the title showing a person at a window displaying a geometrical scroll with the legend 'Altior incubuit animus sub imagine mundi,' to another who holds a pair of compasses and paper with geometrical figures. The colophon is:

'Liber compoti cum commento finit feliciter Impressus Rome per Andream Fritag de Argentina. Anno a natiuitate domini. Millesimo quadragentesimo nonagesimo tertio. Die vero x. Iunii Sedente Alexandro sexto Pont. max. anno eius primo.

Hec. B. S.'

(A. Fritag's device.)

The 12mo 'Compotus magistri Aniani,' printed at Rouen (about 1505) for Robert or Robinet Macé dwelling at Cahors ('Cadomi, iuxta pontem sancti petri'), has eight diagrams of hands, one for finding the Sunday Letter, and one with names and signs of the zodiac. The gloss begins:—'In ista parte auctor prosequitur de suo intento. Computus est talis...' (and ends) '... cum predictis vna dies vult superaddi anno bissextili, id est (in) anno bissextili 2.' On the title-page is a solar face with a dial somewhat similar to the rota littere dominicalis reproduced in the Cambridge edition of the Sarum

¹ This last verse is wanting in the edition of March 15, 1502-3, where the ten verses are called 'Breue compendium.'

² The gloss here seems to be the same as in 1488. Several editions end '... propter bisextum.'

Breviary 1. R. Mace's device shows a mermaid holding up a comb and anchor, lettered 'R. M.'; it is bordered by coats of arms and the mottoes 'Ung Dieu,' 'Ung Roy,' 'Une Foy,' 'Une Loy,' below which is his name 'Robinet Mace.'

Some of the later editions (Paris, 1511, and 1515-16) have two additions which appear to have been introduced in 1508: as the title of the later edition possibly implies:-

Compotus nouissime ampliatus ac emendatus et familiari elucidatus commentario vna cum manibus figurisque suis in locis² decenter adiectis M.d.viij. Cum textuali ordine marginariisque annotaciunculis et compluribus documentis memorabilibus antea non impressis. Compendium denique superadditum est .N. Bone spei trecensis. Necnon modus renouande tabule paschalis3 totius opusculi index aliaque conducibilis' (1515-16)4.

The earlier editions contain an ordinary kalendar (besides the Cisio-ianus), but those of 1511 and 1515-16, as well as the undated sixteenth-century Rouen edition (Macé), have no such kalendar.

The prologus distinguishes this metrical Compotus of master Anian 5 from a larger one, the 'magnus compotus magistri Alexandri de Villa Dei.' The reference is I suppose to the Massa compoti which begins 'Licet modo in fine temporis.'

The verses of Anianus appear to be, generally speaking, the same in the different editions, so far as I have been able to examine them; but Miss Jessica Lewis observes that the seventeen lines (8-24), 'Hic imponatur . . . boabel . dicens . fiet . augur,' occur in the Lyons edition of 1492 in a different collocation i. e. earlier than they do in 1489.

Of some variations in the 'Cisioianus.'

In the Cisioianus lines there is naturally some little variety. As the Oxford Computus says,

'Si mutes vsum, versus mutare licebit.'

1 Brev. ad usum Sarum (Cantab., 1886), iii. p. xv. See also W. Cooke and C. Wordsworth's Directorium Sacerdotum (H. Bradshaw Soc., 1901), ii. 617, Tam in suis locis quam in fine libri positis: 1509 suis in locis auspicato adiectis: 1511.

³ Tabule cerei paschalis: 1511.

4 Lalande (Bibliogr. Astron.) assigns the tables of the Compotus manualis to Nic. Bonaspes, and the gloss to Jacques Marsus, Dauphinois.

⁵ To Anianns in the fifteenth century are attributed the familiar lines of the Zodiac: 'Sunt Aries, Taurus,' &c. Lalande, Bibliographie Astronomique, 1852.

The names of saints recorded in the kalendar differed somewhat in various countries and dioceses. Some printers or editors appear to have contented themselves with reproducing the Cisioianus as they received it from Anianus, leaving to the lecturer to adapt it to his local kalendar; others attempted the task of alteration; and we find occasionally a reference to this in the gloss, and even sometimes a difference in the passage of the text. Where the Oxford book of 1519-20 says, like Pynson's edition of 1506-7:—

'Sunt alii versus pro festis bis duodeni:
Nec tamen hoc vsu reliquos inscribere vidi.
Si mutes vsum, versus mutare licebit;
Namque alios alius versus sibi postulat vsus.
Usu diuerso variantur festa frequenter.
Horum ideo propria mutari metra necesse est.'

—an examination of a few editions shows that there were at least four forms in which the lines were then commonly current. To take the month of January as a specimen:—

(1) 'C I-si. ge. ia-nus e-pi si-bi guil di-cat hil. fe. mau. mar. an. Pris-ca fa(b). ac vin-cen-ti pau-lus iul-que va-le-rus.'

This appears in the Lyons editions of 1489 and 1492, and in the compendium of N. Bone spei of Troyes in 1515-16 it occurs (though reading in the main text, 'Ci-si-o ia-nus e-py,' &c.) in full, under the description of 'Disticha fixorum festorum in morem insignis parrhisiorum dioces.' It reappears in Pynson's Almanach Ephemerides, London, 1506-7.

(2) 'Ci-si-o ia-nus e.pi. lu. fe. la. nus et ken. fe. mau. mar. an. Pris-ca fab. ag. vin-cen-ti. pau-lum iul. ag. que ba-tild.'

This is found in the Kalendar of Shepherdes, printed in Paris in 1503, and in Pynson's edition of the same, printed in London in 1506.

- (3) 'Ci-ci-o ia-nus e-pi. lu-ci-a-nus, et hil. fe. mau. mar. sul. Pris. wul. fab. ag. vin. pe-te. pau-li iul. ag-ne. ba-tyl.'
 This in the Oxford Computus, printed there in 1519-20.
- (4) 'Circ- Ge-no. Ia-nus E-pi. Ri-go. Guil. dat, et Hil. Fe. Bo. Mar-cell.

Pris.que Seb. Ag. Vin. E. Bab. Pau. Pol. Iu. Ca-ro. Bat. Cyr.'

From a later service-book. Psalterium cum hymnis, Paris, 1551. See Directorium Sacerdotum, ii. p. 605 (app.).

To these we may add:-

(5) 'Ci-si-o. Ian. Ed. E-pi. Lu-ci-a-nus et Hil. Fe. Maur. Mar. Sul. Pris. Vul. Fab. Ag. Vin. Pe-te. Pau-li Iul. Ag-ne Ba-til[dis.].' From a Salisbury MS. cir. 1450. See Salisbury Ceremonies, p. 231.

(6) 'Cyr-cum-staunt-ly . thre . Kyngs . came . by . nyght By . an . hye . hyll . or . day . lyght.'

From the Sarum Horae, Paris, 1532. We mark in italics the only festivals here noticed.

(7) 'Cisio Ianus Epiphaniis dic dona magorum
Vincit orans Agne nova Paulum lumina vertent.'

 Pseudo-Bede, in Migne, Patr. Latin. xc. 786.

Leaving out of account the later Paris Horae of 1551 (which notices, besides Ste. Geneviève, Rigobert of Rheims, Bonitus of Clermont, Emerentiana, Babylas, Charlemagne, and Cyr, not being very strict in counting its syllables, while it names the popular St. Sebastian in place of his companion Fabian), we notice the following variants in the month of January:—

To St. Felan, or Filan, son of Feriach and St. Kentigerna, was attributed the English victory over Robert Bruce at Bannockburn in 1314.

The Kentigern of Jan. 13 was the Bishop, St. Mungo (= 'dearest'), whose tomb at Glasgow was in request for miracles.

'Pierre l'Egyptien' is given on Jan. 23 in Migne's Encycl. Théol.

xvii, p. 1006. But perhaps pele is merely an imperative verb addressed to the reader, and put in to fill out the line with syllables sufficient to place St. Paul on the 25th.

The gloss or comment says:-

'Unde est notandum quod quelibet dyocesis habet suum modum dicendi circa ista viginti quatuor versus. Et hoc secundum festa sanctorum, que festa colunt in vna Dyocesi¹, et non in alia: sed iste modus hic insertus² est modus generalis in francia' (ed. Lyons, 1489).

In 1506-7 Pynson for his English readers concludes the sentence 'Sed iste modus hic incertus t est modus generalis.' And so the Paris edition of 1515-16.

The 'Ars Compoti Manualis' in the Digby MS. 190, in the Bodleian Library, contains on leaves 71, 72 a double series of the 'Cisioianus,' beginning as follows:—

- (8) 'Cisio Ianus epi. sibi vendicat hinc Feli. Marcel.'
- (9) 'Scissa Geno. sec.3 epi. retinet Ianus Il. Fe. Mau. Mar. An.'

In the Digby collection there are two copies of the 'Computus Manualis in vsum Cantebrig.' Of these Digby MS. 15 was written by a scribe named Bernys, or Barnes. The opening of this agrees with No. 5, which we have cited on p. 118, only with 'Cicio' for 'Cisio'.'

Digby MS. 81, by the scribe J. de Marisco, 'secundum vsum Cantebrigie,' differs somewhat in the second line, thus:—

(10) 'Cicio Ianus ephi . . . sulp.

Prisc. wlst. fab. agn. vin. quoque con.5 iul. a. se.6 batil.'

1 'dyocesim': 1498 ('dyocesi': 1492).

2 'inceptus': 1492. 'incertus': 1506-7, 1515-16.

+ = sic.

⁸ For 'sec.' on Jan. 5, I find no saint nearer than 'Syncletica,' which is unsatisfactory.

^{&#}x27;Perhaps the most noticeable variant in the Cambridge Use, as found in their 'Cisioianus,' is St. Philibert on Aug. 20. He was founder of Jumièges abbey. Some names found in the Cambridge Use, but omitted in that of Oxford (e.g. Faith, Gereon, Kalixtus, and Wulfram, all in the month of October), are found in ordinary kalendars of the Sarum type.

A KALENDAR

NEWLY CONSTRUCTED (1904) TO ILLUSTRATE LINES 94-117 OF THE 'COMPOTUS MANUALIS IN VSUM OXONIENSIUM,' PRINTED BY C. KYRFOTH IN 1519-20

ALTHOUGH Kyrfoth's Oxford Computus does not contain a kalendar fully set out in the accustomed manner, his readers would naturally have one before them, so that they might understand his meaning. I have attempted to reconstruct one from his data. See below, lines 94-117, the 'Cisioianus,' with Oxford holidays, &c. noted in it. I reprint the couplet of 'Ci-si-o-ia-nus' for each month at the head of the page, and then (so to express it) plant out the several festivals, which it specifies, in an almanac form on the days severally indicated. The place of each has been ascertained by noticing the position occupied in the couplet by the syllable or syllables which denote each feast. Thus (e. g.) I place St. Hilary on January 13, because 'Hil.' is the thirteenth syllable in the distich for that month.

I have added at the foot of each month the corresponding lines from the Cisioianus of Pynson's Almanach Ephemerides of 1506-7. See above, pp. 2-8. It will be observed that the syllables of the nonsense lines A-Dam De-Ge-Bat (= 'At Dover Dwells George Brown') are prefixed to the several months by Pynson. See p. 4.

THE DIAGRAMS.

In the preceding table of printed Computi manuales, when we describe the later editions as containing '8+2' diagrams, we mean that there are eight diagrams of hands, human left hands, closed or open 1, and two charts or diagrams of a different character: thus—

- Hand (1) Open palm: Manus sinistra pro parte interiori describes the joints of the thumb and fingers: 'Pollex, summitas pollicis, supra radix, radix pollicis'; and similarly 'Index,' 'Medius,' and 'Medicus,' and their corresponding joints ('summitas,' &c.). In some systems the 'pollex' is disregarded.
- Hand (2) The back. In some editions, e.g. 1515-16, (a) manus sinistra pro parte exteriori, the whole palm turned round: Medicus, Medicus, Index. In others, e.g. 1490-1, 1502-3, (b) the wrist and thumb as before, but the fingers turned down and clenched on the palm so as to show their backs, and described, e.g. 'Auricularis, prima subungula, secunda subungula, grossa radix minimi' (disregarding the thumb).
- Hand (3) Open: Manus sinistra pro parte interiori. The memorial nonsense line 'Filius esto dei celum bonus accipe grates' imposed on the various joints of the several fingers.
- Hand (4) The back: in some editions turned round at the wrist to show the back of the entire hand; in others, the backs of the four fingers are brought into view by closing the fist. Manus sinistra pro parte exteriori. The same verse, 'Filius esto . . . grates.' (Hands 3 and 4 are intended for reckoning the Sunday Letters, F, E, D, C, B, A, G.)
- Hand (5) Open: Manus sinistra pro parte interiori, drawn as in nos. I and 3 above. The four nonsense lines 'Fructus alit,' 'Et genitrix,' 'Dat flores,' and 'Cambit edens,' as given above on p. 6, the fourth line serving for leap-years with twofold Sunday letters, as the three other lines do for common years.
- Hand (6) The back: the same lines as in no. 5, applied to the joints 'pro parte exteriori'. In certain editions, e.g. 1490-1, 1502-3, the beginnings of lines r and 2 only are applied to diagrams (5) or (6), while the remainder of those two lines are applied to the companion figure of the pair, while the lines 'Et genetrix' and 'Dat flores' are discarded.

- Hand (7) Open: manus sinistra pro parte interiori; the joints of each of four fingers lettered successively D, E, F, G.
- Hand (8) The back: pro parte exteriori; the letters A, B, C, applied to the joints of the backs of each of the four fingers.
- [Hand (9). No. (1) above is merely repeated, on the title-page in the edition of Robinet Macé, Rouen, cir. 1500.]
- Chart (i) Zodiacal signs ('Est Aries, Taurus,' &c.) and the names of the corresponding months arranged in two concentric circles round the Sun's face.

Chart (ii) Table to find the Golden Number and the Sunday Letters for any common year or bissextile in the fifteenth or sixteenth century. There are three concentric circles whereof the outer disk contains the series of aurei numeri from i. up to xix. The middle circle has litterae Dominicales in recurring order from g to a, while the inner circle gives in every fourth place the proper Sunday Letter for the later months of each leap-year in the series. See Kalendar sheet in Breviarium ad usum Sarum, ed. Cantab. 1886, iii. p. (xv). In the Computus of 1515-16, the centre of this chart is occupied by a note '¶ Hec est tabula ad cognoscendum literas dominicales cuiuslibet anni, secundum principium suum voluenda, et semper duratura.'

The two charts and the eight hands occur in varying order in different editions. The editions prior to 1500, and a Paris edition of 1502, contain a smaller number of diagrams.

Among numerous tables which illustrate the Compoti of Hilperic, Garland, &c. in the beautifully written MS. I. 15 at St. John's Coll., Cambridge, formerly at Conventus Londoñ, and in the eighteenth century the property of Bishop Wagstaff and of T. Baker (both Nonjurors), there is on p. 52 a zodiacal circle in red, blue, green, and yellow. In the Sarum printed Breviary of 1531 is a rota litterae dominicalis, which I have twice reproduced: in 1882, adapting it to the nineteenth century, and in 1901 (Direct. Sacerd. ii. 617) for the twentieth.

Some Copies of the 'Computus' in Manuscript.

The following MSS. of the Compotus Aniani have come under my notice:—

Compotus est talis, &c.

There is a 'compotus versificatus' (which I have not seen) at Caius College Library, MS. 141, art. 7, bound with the 'Compotus Gerlandi' and the 'Almanach Profacii.' Also 'massa compoti cum tabulis et kalendario,' MS. 385, art. 11, besides other treatises mentioned in our list hereafter.

- (a) 'Filius esto Dei,' &c., i. e. verse 9 of Anian (see p. 161):—British Museum, MS. Harl. 955, ff. 83b-84b. (See Direct. Sacerd. ii. pp. 608-9.)
- (b) The same beginning: 'Compotus manualis,' saec. xv. Trin. Coll. Cam. MS. 1081, O. 1. 57, ff. 22-31. (c) Also Brit. Mus. Egerton MS. 843, ff. 38b-39b, with gloss. (Formerly in Trin. Coll. O. 2. 45.)
- (c) 'Mobilis ibo cifos,' &c., i.e. verse 178 of Anian (see p. 171):— Trin. Coll. Cam. MS. O. 2. 5.

The opening line 'Compotus est talis,' &c., appears in Sarum Missals printed at Paris and Rouen in 1500 (fol.), 1503 (8vo), and 1504-5 (J. du Pre), and in the Sarum Manual (4to), 1523, and perhaps some other editions of 'quedam regule secundum parvum compotum ecclesie Romane.' See Directorium Sacerdotum, ii. 612 (1901).

Of the title 'Computus' or 'Compotus.'

E TYMOLOGICALLY the word (Lat.) 'Compotus,' (Fr.) 'Composts, (Engl.) 'Compot,' may be referred to componere rather than to computare, but in use it was frequently made equivalent to computatio. A 'computus roll' is the common expression for the annual account of a bursar or treasurer; and as regards treatises bearing the name it is practically impossible in many instances to say, if you judge from the title or opening alone, and unless you have some technical acquaintance with 'such branches of learning,' whether you have before you the artem iactandi computum (a mediaeval treatise on the precursor of single and double entry, or, as we should say now, 'commercial arithmetic, or even a common elementary arithmetic), or an instruction on 'the way to find Easter,' &c., and such other matters as were included with the 'compotus ecclesiasticus.' In point of fact a considerable number of MSS, combine instruction on both.

The curious form compotatio will be found below, p. 140, under the name Cyrillus Alexandrinus. See further, p. 151, below.

A List of Books on the 'Computus.'

The following list of books (in many cases of treatises still in MS.) may help future inquiry, and it will be seen that not only many of the items are now at Oxford, but the authors of a good many were bred in our English Universities 1. I have arranged them in alphabetical order.

Abbo Floriacensis (martyr, cir. 990). Praefatio commentarii in cyclum Victorii. 'Calculum Victorii, dum quondam . . . exordium. Amor sapientiae,' &c. Item in circulorum decennovenalibus B. Cyrilli et Dionysii Romani ac Bedae. 'Dionysius abbas genere Romanus... redeuntes.' Migne, Patr. Latin. cxxxix. 569, 572-8. Compotus vulgaris, qui dicitur Ephemerida Abbonis. St. John's Coll. Cam. MS. I. 15 § 7, pp. 281-347a, contains tables. 'Ardua conexe libat sacraria forme,' &c. 'Quoniam brevitatem semper comitatur obscuritas . . . sic de ceteris intellige.' But his work de sphera in the same MS., pp. 300, 302, 338 speak of this writer as alive in 1086-92. Excerptio Abbonis ex Igino de figuratione signorum. 'Denique, ut dicit Plinius . . . salvator mundi evertit.' Trin. Coll. Cam. MS. R. 15. 32, ff. 200-12. See also St. John's Coll. Oxon. MS. 17. 'Annorum duo . . . Antequam de re . . .' Digby MS. 56, fo. 169b. Bale mentions 'circuli annorum' calculated by Abbo from the Birth of Christ to A. D. 1595.

Adelardus. His 'compotus,' now Brit. Mus. MS. Cotton Calig. A. xv. part 2, was perhaps formerly MS. 287 at Ch. Ch., Canterbury.

AEGIDIVS DE VALLECENIS. His Compotus, now Bodl. Ashmole 341 (thirteenth century) was, as Dr. James tells us, MS. 1130 at St. Augustine's, Canterbury.

Albericus (? Casinensis, cir. A.D. 1057). De compoto lune, capp. xxxviii. St. John's Coll. Cam. MS. A. 22, § 4. (There was a copy at Ch. Ch., Canterbury, MS. 91.)

ALEXANDER: See 'Villa Dei.'

ALGORISMUS COMPOTI. This is frequently contained in the same volume as 'de Sphera' and 'de Compoto.' See Christ Church, Canterbury, MS. 1605; St. Augustine's, Canterbury, MS. 1117, 'Algorismus metrice, et in eodem Compotus, liber Aniani,' &c.; MS. 1129, 'Compotus, et in eodem Algorismus'; MS. 1552 (Brit. Mus. Add. 26770) 'Compotus I. de Garlandia' with 'Algorismus, Spera,' &c. A treatise beginning 'Hec algorismus ars,' entitled 'Algorismus compoti (metrificatus)' was found in four MSS. at Dover Priory, 334 (4), 411 (7), 420 (4), and 442 (4). See also St. Augustine's, Canterbury, MS. 1456 (with Ovid, &c.). See list of Arts' subjects, p. 33.

Anianus magister, saec. xv. See pp. 114-16. MS. Ashm. 357.

'ARS KALENDARII.' 'Per veterum sagacitatem compositus suit kalendarius . . . recessit a nostro emisperio. Amen.' Trin. Coll. Cam. MS. O. 2. 5. ff. 43–50 (cir. 1400). See Camb. Univ. MS. Gg. iv. 29 § 5, ff. 86a–88, which, however, ends 'Semper quindenis ponuntur signa kalendis.' 'Ars kalendarii glosata,' Dover Priory MS. 4256, began 'Ter quinos Domini.' Cf. Catalogue of St. Aug. Cantuar., MS. No. 1563. Ars Compoti manualis. 'Ad habendum ciclum . . .' Digby, 190, fo. 69.

Bacon, Roger. His 'compotus' was in MS. 1167 at St. Augustine's, Canterbury; his 'Kalendar' a tabulis tholetanis, A.D. 1292, in MSS. 1156, 1170 (now at Corpus Chr. Coll. Oxon., MS. 221, and Bodl. 464); and 'De Canone Hebreorum,' MS. No. 1142.

Bacon, Roger, Computus, 'Omnia tempus habent.' Bale, from J. Pullan.

'Baldwinus de Marrochio' (native of the Netherlands). Tractatus compoti manualis. 'Ad habendum in manu prompte in quo die mensis...' Camb. Univ. MS. Ii. iii. 3, § 3.

Beda venerabilis, A. D. 673-735.

De temporibus. 'Tempora momenti... Deo soli patet.' Migne, Patr. Lat. xc. 293-578.

De temporum Ratione 'De natura rerum et ratione . . . custodiat,' p. 295. 'Incipit liber. De computo vel loquela digitorum. De temporum ratione (Deo iuvante) dicturi . . . accipere palmam' (p. 578).

'De ratione computi. Interrog. Unde dicta sunt tempora? p. 599. De paschae celebratione. Rev. et S. fratri Wicthaedae presb. Beda. Libenter accepi litteras . . . tibi fessus.'

Beda (pseudo). De computo dialogus. 'Augustinus dixit de iiii. divisionibus scripturae . . . centena millia pervenit,' xc. 647-51. De ratione calculi. 'Unitas illa . . .' p. 677. De loquela per gestum digitorum. 'Quoniam fortasse . . .', p. 685. De argumentis+ lunae, p. 701. Compotus vulgaris qui dicitur ephemeris, 'Quadratus,' p. 729. Anni distributio. 'Cisio Ianus Epiphaniis,' &c., p. 786. 'Compotus in quaterno, et in eodem Beda de calculacione compoti.' St. Aug.

Cantuar. MS. No. 1128. 'Excerpcio de compoto Bede,' together with Aldhelm 'De laude virginum,' 'Cato,' &c. ibid. MS. No. 1429.

Bedae liber de computo lunae, St. John's Coll. Cam. MS. A. 22, § 2. De ratione computi. 'Unde dicta sunt tempora . . .' De temporibus. See Cockayne's Leechdoms, iii. p. 231. Ratio computandi per digitos et utramque manum ex Bedae de Rat. Temp., Basil. 1529, Paris, 1565. De augmentis lunae. 'Augmentum est velox . . .' Ephemeris, sive computus vulgaris. 'Quadratus hic equilaterus . . .' De embolismorum racione computus. 'Ianuarius primus mensis . . .' Bale cites, as Bede's, a book de computo (then in the hands of J. Locke) 'Annus solaris vt maiorum prudentia,' de mensibus ac diebus, 'Ianuarius mensium anni primus,' and de computo, 'Romulus.'

Beda de divisione anni (16 lines). 'Bis sena mensum vertigine.' Trin. Coll. Camb. MS. O. 2. 24, saec. xii (Patr. Lat. xciv. 613). De Ratione tempp. et de compoto lunae, St. John's Coll. MSS. A. 22; I. 15 (2), p. 19. Incipiunt capitula (1). De compoto vel loquela digitorum. 'De temporum . . .' (72 chapters). Ep. ad Withedum. I. 15 (3), p. 224. Garland, Gerlandus, Io. de Garlandia. Writers of this name occur about 1040 and 1200 (canon of Besançon) and our English writer who lived cir. 1180–1252. To this name is sometimes attributed the treatise 'Licet modo in fine temporum.' (See 'Villa Dei,' 'Bredon,' 'Massa compoti,' &c.) The following are perhaps to be attributed to the canon of Besançon or to an earlier namesake.

GARLANDI TABULAE. 'Tres tabule sequentes facilitant multum compotum manualem correcte. (1) Tabula principalis Gerlandi. (2) Contra tabula. (3) Tabula terminorum. (1) In four columns, shows concurrentes, litteras bisextiles, litteras dominicales, and annos Domini.

(2) litt. Dom., litt. tabulares, Dies Septuagesime, Pasche, Rogationum, Pentecostes, &c. (as in modern Prayer Books).

(3) Table for finding the moons: an ordinary kalendar usually follows:—Bodl. MS. Digby, 190, ff. 75^b—76^b (olim 81^b); Brit. Mus. Sloane MS. 514, ff. 10^b—17^b; MS. Harl. 3814, ff. 77^b—86^b has, after principal table, 'Hec est doctrina tabule precedentis, que est tabula principalis Gerlandi. Secunda tabula principalis gerlandi dicitur, cuius longitudo per 29. distinctiones protenditur,' &c. Cf. MSS. Camb. Univ. Ii. i. 15 § 7; Ii. iii. 3 § 2, where the preface to a kalendar (cent. ? xiii) begins, 'Composicio ii. tabularum Garlandi . . . ' perhaps edited by J. de Sacrobosco.

'Incipit compotus domini Gerlandi, Bedam imitantis. 'Sepe volumina domini Bede, &c., de scientia computandi replicans . . . hic littera signante natalis ascensionis diem et horam in primo ordines.' 'Quare concurrentes,' &c. Table of cycles, moons, &c. Brit. Mus. MS. Cotton Vesp. A. ix. ff. 33-70. St. John's Coll. Cam. MS. I. 15, § 10, pp. 353-94. 'Garlandi tabula cum canone,' 'Sepe volumina' (27 chapters), including 'Superioris pagine ratio . . . per digitos et articulos computantibus,' and 'Liber Garlandi,' ibid. pp. 363-94, and Tabula Dionysii de termino paschali, c. 25, p. 387. See Bodl. MSS. Ashmol. 341; Laud, K. 61, f. 14. 'Incipit compotus mag. Gerlandi Bedam imitantis, &c. Sepe volumina, &c. Super i. librum Compoti Gerlandi. In Compoto Gerlandi unde agatur, &c.; Incipit summa de compoto, &c. . . . idus Septembris. Summa de compoto ecclesiastico. Antequam de re dicatur,' &c. Bodl. MS. Digby 56 [B. N. 4], ff. 170-217. Kalendar, followed by Ars componens ('componnes')1 principalis tabule Gerlandi. Ad compositionem principalis tabule Gerlandi. 2. cicli solaris scilicet et 19 l. sunt necessarii. (Diagram of a hand on fo. 13.) Tabula Gerlandi principalis. Tabula ad sciendum in quo signo sit luna. Brit. Mus. MS. Harl. 3735, ff. 6b-15b. 'Tabula principalis Gerlandi compositionem ciclos solares et 191' et litteras tabulares ... et sic per omnia compones, ordinabis, compositamque verificabis tabulam Gerlandi principalem.' MS. Harl. 3647. Tabula principalis Gerlandi, complectens in se multa ecclesie vtilia.' Brit. Mus. MS. 12. C. xvii. 7b, 8 preceded by a Kalendar. See also C. C. Coll. Cant., Parker MS. 347. 'Compotus J. de Garlandia,' with Algorismus, Sphera, &c. Brit. Mus. Add. 26770, was MS. 1552 at St. Augustine, Canterbury. 'Compotus Gerlandi' was also at Ch. Ch., Canterbury, MS. 285.

GERALDI Compotus was at Canterbury Coll. Oxon. in 1524. No. 251 (dictio probatoria '-simi anni').

GERLANDUS, see 'Garland.'

GROSSETESTE, Ro. LINCOLNIENSIS episcopus, A. D. 1175-1253. Compotus Ro. episcopi Lincoln. Gonv. Cai. MS. 141(6) with others: Ro. INTRODUCTION TO 'COMPOTUS MANUALIS AD VSUM OXONIENSIUM,'

1519-20

AMONG the contents of the Kalender of the Shepeherdes, drawn out of French into English, and printed at London by Ri. Pynson in 1506, is a section entitled—

'I The table of the mouable festis with the compounde Manuell,' or a rule 'to knowe the holy dayes after the compounde manuwell by youre Joyntes'.'

Pynson says he translated the book 'for by cause he sawe that men of other countres intermedellyd with that that they cowde no skyll in': in other words, there had been a previous attempt made at Paris to put the book into 'English, as she is spoke.' Pynson generally describes the main portions of the work as 'the compot (or 'compote') and the kalender 2.' The 'Kalender (with the Fygures of euery Saynt that is halowed in the yere, in the whiche is the signes, the houres, the momentes, and the newe Mones)' compiled for the years 1497-1516. Also the 'table of the mouable festis with the compounde Manuell.' 'This present book is named the Compot (he says), for it comprehends fully all the compot and more for the days, hours, and moments, and the new moons and [e]clipses of the sun and the moon, and of the signs that the moon is in every day.' And this book was made for them that be no clerks, to bring them to great understanding 3.'

For 'clarkes,' or scholars, there was the Computus manualis in Latin. Of this three recensions are known to me 4, the second of them being the Computus manualis in usum Oxoniensium.

³ Ibid. p. 12.

⁴ I do not count the Paris book of 1498, 'cum commento,' noticed by Panzer and others as containing a different recension, for I have not seen it.

The other portions of the Kalendar of Shepherds are occupied with the Tree of Vices and Pains of Hell, the Tree of Virtue and way of Health, Governance of Health, and the High Astronomy of Shepherds.

COMPOTUS MANUALIS AD VSUM OXONIENSIUM.

Printed by Charles Kyrfoth, St. John Baptist-street, Oxford, 5 Feb. 1519-20.

Among books sold by John Dorne, the Dutch bookseller in Oxford, were two copies of Computus manualis Oxonie on Feb. 28 and March 5, 1520, the former for one penny, the latter for '3 j,' meaning $3\frac{1}{2}d$. On May 10, 1520, he sold a copy of Computus Oxonie manualis for 1d. Mr. Madan, in editing Dorne's Day-book, mentions that the book, sold in 1520, and at that time fresh from the press, is now represented by a single copy which is in the University Library at Cambridge 1. This we reprint on pp. 159-75.

In his no less valuable account of the Early Oxford Press (1895) Mr. Madan mentions this Cambridge copy of the 'Compotus' of 1519 (or, as we should now say, 1520)². It consists of sixteen small quarto pages (or two sheets signed A and B) with a curious title-page and the large woodcut of the arms of Oxford University. There are also four diagrams of an open or closed hand with the joints lettered or inscribed, not (as Mr. Madan supposed) to teach arithmetical computation³ generally, as we may say 'by rule of thumb,' but to help the reader to reel off his memoria technica respecting the almanac, after the manner of

- '.Thirty days hath September,' or
- 'At Dover Dwells George Brown Esquire.'

This use of the word computus or compolus for a kalendar, or, more strictly, for the computations in the tables included in the almanac, is of course both early and well known. Several treatises de Computo are printed, for instance, among the works of the Venerable Bede. See above, pp. 137-8.

¹ See Oxford Hist. Soc. Collectanea, i. (nos. 313, 460, 760), pp. 88, 94, 104, 152-3.

³ According to Thompson Cooper's Biogr. Dict., the first book on arithmetic printed in England was Bp. Cuthbert Tunstal's De Arte Supputandi, Lond. 1522, 4°, Pynson.

Hänel's Catalogi Manuscriptorum mentions at Basel 'Computus manualis Hermanni,' F. iii. 25, and 'Computus manualis metrice scriptus,' fol. F. v. 2. A metrical computus was written by John of Halifax (Sacrobosco) in 1244, and calculated down to 1256. Thomas of Newmarket (Novo mercatu) wrote a prose commentary upon it, a copy which is in the Bodleian, MS. Digby 81. It is akin to the work of which Pynson printed the text and comment, and Kyrfoth the text for Oxford use. But it is of Cambridge use 1.

The importance of a knowledge of the kalendar and Computus was pressed upon the clergy by the Council of Aachen (c. 70) in 789, and the capitula of Charles the Great (i. 68; vi. 226, &c.), as well as by Regino of Prum (†915) in his visitation articles (no. 92), in which he requires that each priest of the diocese—

'Compostum minorem, id est, epactas, concurrentes, regulares, terminum paschalem, et reliquos, si est possible, sapiat' (ap. Du Cange).

Bede, who was perhaps the most laborious of writers upon the computus and kalendar, in his book De remediis peccatorum (c. 1) was said to have bidden those who aspired to holy orders to prepare their tools, or weapons (arma sacerdotalia), viz.—besides seven other books—compotum cum (al. 'et') cyclo. Jo. Januensis derives the word compotus and computus from computare; but the French form compost and our compot, or compote, seem to be akin to ponere, rather than to putare. The French form compoust (in a document of 1477, Reg. 197, charto. reg. ch. 278) is noted by Du Cange. Doubtless, however, those who used the form computus connected it with computare, and this appears to be the etymology suggested in Murray's English Dictionary. We have seen the curious words componnes or compones (p. 141, n.), and compotatio (p. 140).

The book before us has four diagrams of a man's left hand, two of them showing the open palm, two of them exhibiting the knuckles of the closed hand.

Our stationer's counter is strewn every autumn with large choice of convenient diaries and almanacs for the coming year, and it is difficult to us to realize the trouble which the vicar of our parish church five centuries ago had in turning his Pye (if he possessed such a volume), or in making a computation in the tables of his Portos to ascertain which line in the Breviary pica was applicable any day or year. The shepherd of Salisbury Plain, in the sixteenth century, carved out his 'dials quaintly, point by point,' and he had his kalendar literally by 'rule of thumb' and his new moons 'at his fingers' ends.'

Apparently the learned clergy and the clerks of Oxenford were not above using their hands as a natural abacus. In the Leofric Missal there is an Anglo-Saxon kalendar, written in the southern province of this country, about the year 970, which contains what is called Imago manus humanae¹. It is Manus Dei with the joints and parts so inscribed with nineteen dates from March 21 to April 18, i.e. the places of the golden numbers of Paschal Term. Upon the diagram is written also the motto, Dextera nam Domini fulget cum floribus Paschae.

At the present day we rarely use more than the tips of our fingers for counting, but in past generations when paper was scarce, or where winds blew high, it was found convenient to tell off threes upon the joints of the thumb of the left hand. To reckon the seven days of one week the forefinger was in request. Double it down upon the palm and work up from the nail; you get three days ('A. B. C. sunt extra,' says the 'compotus')2; open it out and you get the other four. G. at the tip (supra), 'F. E.' (on the middle joints) and D. the joint in the palm ('manet infra'). Take the other fingers in like manner and you get a month of twenty-eight days (the three joints in the thumb would give enough for thirty-one). Or the twenty-eight joints would come in useful for the twenty-eight years of a solar cycle. Again, by putting a double burden of letters upon the joints of the little finger in reckoning years, you reserve that fourth finger for the leap years, 'once in four.' Lines 135-40 of the 'computus' show in like manner how the nineteen golden numbers of the lunar cycle may be stowed away within the hand. The twelve months (line 141) and the prime of the moon in each (line 146) were similarly calculated.

In the Middle Ages St. Augustine himself was believed to have said that the Computus was one of the seven books which it was necessary for the priest to know. The passage (quoted by Durandus in his Rationale Divinorum, VIII. i. 1) is cited in the Canon Law (Decreti Prima Pars distinct. xxxviii. 5) as ex dictis Augustini. The passage is traceable to the so-called Penitential of Bede, De remediis peccatorum (Spelman, Concil. i. 281). It is not, however, found in Haddan and Stubbs's Concilia, iii. 326-34 in that document, but elsewhere; namely, in the later collection (ibid. iii. 417), often known as 'Egbert's Penitential.'

The British Museum contains a manuscript Compotus Manualis, or at least the first part of one which is now imperfect at the end (Harl. 995, fo. 83-4). It was written about 1430-40. The part which is extant contains twenty-three lines of Latin memorial verse, out of which I recognize twelve lines in the printed Oxford Computus of 1519-20 now preserved at Cambridge, besides six other lines which have the same sense or purposes expressed in a different way. I have recently printed the Harleian fragment with explanatory notes by the late Mr. J. R. Lunn and myself, as Appendix iii to the Sarum Pye, or Directorium Sacerdotum, for the 'Henry Bradshaw Society,' 1901, II. pp. 608-10. (A correction for p. 609 of that volume will be found in the present work, p. 6, n.)

The few lines which I find in MS. Harl. 955, not in any way represented in Compotus Manualis ad usum Oxoniensium, are these:—

· I Pro diebus in anno.

Ter centos†, ter vicenos, cum quinque diebus, Sex horas anno, non plus, scribas, tibi dico.'

(i. e. The year contains 300, 3 score and 5 days, 6 hours, and no more, according to the Computus.)

Three other lines will appear in our notes. Mr. Madan tells us that Panzer, after Maittaire, mentions a Paris edition of the Compolus manualis, printed in 1498 cum commento. A list of editions will be found at p. 113.

In 1500, and 1504-5, the folio Sarum Missals printed at Paris by J. de Pré, as in 1523, and later years, the Sarum Manuale, or 'ritual' of occasional offices, comprised a little treatise of this kind (similar to that which Kyrfoth had printed in usum Oxoniensium), as part of the kalendar for clergy and others following Sarum use. I have printed this from the editions of 1523 (folio), and 1554 (Kingston and Sutton's quarto), as Appendix iv to the Directorium Sacerdotum, with notes by J. R. Lunn, Prebendary W. A. Whitworth and myself, pp. 612-29¹.

The Computus in the Sarum Missal and Manual opens with the same line as that of Oxford does—and contains a good many verses in common. It consists, however, of but ninety-three lines, while that in usum Oxoniensium has 257 (besides its commendation to the reader). Some of the extra lines omitted in the Sarum books relate to the hands, which are not figured in the manual, nor in the Compotus manualis therein contained, notwithstanding its name and title.

The Sarum Compotus contains twenty-six short sections 2. Eleven of these are practically identical with portions of our Oxford book. These we will indicate by italics in the following table of contents for the Manuale:—

² See Additional Note.

CONTENTA IN COMPOTO: MANUALE SARUM, A.D. 1523. Compotus est talis proprie dictus manualis (li. 1).

- 1. Pro litera dominicali.
- 2. Pro annis Domini habendis (li. 37; 9).
- 3. Pro bissexto.
- 4. Pro concurrente (li. 46-7).
- 5. Pro numero dierum cuiuslibet mensis (li. 62-6).
- 6. De .vij. planetis (li. 67).
- 7. Quot nonas, idus, et kalendas (li. 69-71).
- 8. De .xij. signis (li. 75-7).
- 9. De numero aureo (li. 129-31).
- 10. Pro situatione [numerorum aureorum in kalendario] (li. 153-4).
- II. Pro lunatione embolismali (li. 175-7).
- 12. Pro clauibus [terminorum festorum mobilium].
- 13. Pro Aduentu (cf. li. 217-8).
- 14. Pro indictionibus (li. 240-4).
- 15. Pro diebus egris (li. 235-6).
- 16. Pro solstitiis.
- 17. Pro observatione ieiuniorum (li. 232-3; 230-1).
- 18. Pro .iiij. temporibus (li. 229).
- 19. Pro festis mobilibus inueniendis.
- 20. Versus pro historiis fiendis.
- 21. Regula sponsalium.
- 22. De Aduentu, &c.
 23. Festa in quorum missa dicitur 'Credo.'
- 24. Pro collectis finiendis.
- 25. Pro exorcistis.
- 26. De proprietatibus hostie.

Thus, taking the first eighteen sections of the Sarum Computus, which consists, so far, of fifty lines, we recognize thirty-five lines which appear also in the Oxford book of 1519-20.

As to the contents of our Oxford book the anonymous author tells us that it consists of four parts, which may be thus summarized:—

Part I.—Of the Solar Cycle.

Part II.—Of the Lunar Cycle.

Part III.—Of Festivals.

Part IV.—Of different Seasons.

A fuller table of contents will be found prefixed to this book, and to the document itself, pp. 157-8.

The use of the joints (juncture) of the lest hand in reckonings of the almanac is set forth in the Compot, (French) Compost, or Kalendar of Shepeherdes drawn up in 1487-97 and printed in 1506 and later years. We may quote some lines of it from Dr. H. Oskar Sommer's reprint from Pynson's edition of 1506, London, Kegan Paul & Co., 4to, 1892, iii. p. 15¹.

· I Here be the foure secretys of this present Kalender.

¹ The Paris edition of 1503, which Dr. Sommer prints in facsimile in an earlier part of the volume, has many curious verbal variations, to which our readers may like to refer. We give one or two of them in the following notes. The rules in 1503 are cast in the form of a rude verse with rhymes, but the English has been strangely disguised by the Parisian compositor.

² 'The towm owt takyn' (i.e. exclusive of the thumb), ed. Paris, 1503.

³ The leche fyngere: 'digitus medicus,' the 'fourth' finger (reckoning the thumb, as the Book of Common Prayer wedding rubric does), the ring-finger, next the smallest. Pliny, Hist. Nat. xxx. 12. 34 ('put in the medycyn d. f.': ed. 1503).

⁴ So the Paris edition of 1503.

■ After Bran¹, Pen, Cro, Lucy, the embrynge dayes is set for euery wan to fast.

In these two lynes be as many sylables as be dayes in the Monthe, set them in as many Ioyntes on the lefte hande².

I Ianyuer.

Ci-si-o. Ia-nus E-pi. Lu. Fe. Ia-nus et Ken. Fe. Mau. Mar. An. Pris-ca Fab. Ag. Vin-cen-ti Pau[-]lum ³ Iul. Ag. que Ba-tild.' (And so on with the other months.)

These lines for the festivals are approximately the same in the Kalender of the Shepherdes as in Kyrfoth's Oxford textbook, only the Oxford list is specially adapted for English use 4. There is nothing here (1506) to help us interpret one or two doubtful syllables which we shall find in 1519-20. (See pp. 121-32, 166-8.)

¹ Brandones = faces, or bordae (torches, or brands). The first week of Lent was so called from the custom of boys running about the streets with lighted torches. The Second Sunday in Lent was called 'Dominica post focos,' or 'post ignes,' and the First Sunday was known in Germany as 'Der Funcken Tag.' (R. T. Hampson, Kalendars of the Middle Ages, Lond. 8vo [1841], ii. 34-5.)

^{2 &#}x27;Of the wrong hond': ed. 1503.

⁸ So the Paris edition of 1503.

THE text, printed at Oxford, February, 1519-20, is here reprinted from the unique copy, AB. 4. 69 (5), in the University Library at Cambridge.

It has been collated with a very similar, larger (though imperfect), and unique copy of an edition printed by R. Pynson (bearing his autograph) about 1507, Almanach Ephemerides in the British Museum, C. 20. a. 33. The result of collation appears in our foot-notes to the ensuing pages.

COMPOTUS MANUALIS

ad vsum

Oxoniensium

[Woodcut of a Teacher lecturing. See our frontispiece.]

C. Kyrfoth: Oxon. 1519-20.

IO

Compotus est talis proprie dictus manualis Leua manus totum nobis facit hunc fore notum.

² Quattuor in partes opus hoc distinguere debes Dat ciclum prima solis: luneque secunda. Tercia dat festa: distinguit tempora quarta.

Ciclus solaris septem quater occupat annos Ac in iuncturis totidem poni decet illos.

¶ PORTIO PRIMA 3.

[Pro annis Domini habendis.]

Hic imponatur iuncturis postea versus 'Filius', esto, dei, celum, bonus, accipe, grates.' 'Filius,' F. signans, annum primum manifestat. Solis, indicis hanc radix tenet, 'esto' dat E; quam Vult medii radix: alia radice dieque. Et sic de reliquis facies, velut ordo requirit.

² Pynson (1507) prints his metrical contents at the end (p. 36b) of his volume, thus:—(after the 'Breue compendium').

'Diuisio libri.

Quattuor in libro partes [te] non latet esse: Quarum prima notat quis solis circulus extat. Altera demonstrat quo ciclo luna mouetur. Tercia festa docet, que continuo variantur. Quartaque temporibus partitur quattuor annum. Diffinitio cicli solaris.

Est spacium ciclus solaris quo peragrando Celum signiferum complet septem quater annos Sol et† ad idem punctum cursum petit vnde recessit. Hos annos domini clare tibi littera monstrat Quos in iuncturis debes mutare sinistre.'

³ The italic letters and headings, which are introduced to help the reader, are not (it is hardly necessary to state) so distinguished in the original of 1519-20, where only one fount of type was available.

Primo ponuntur radices: inde sequuntur
Iuncture medie: postea sunt relique.

NOTES ON THE COMPOTUS MANUALIS, AD USUM OXONIENSUM (pp. 161-175)

LINE 1. 'Compotus est talis': See above, pp. 135, 153.

1. 2. 'Leua manus': The manus sinistra appears in the diagrams. See above, p. 133.

l. 6. 'The solar-cycle consists of twenty-eight years. Count it upon the joints ('iuncturas') of your hand.' See T. Hothyrsall's Prologus in Picam Ebor. 1497, Direct. Sacerd. pp. 569-72, 634.

1. 8. foll. The memorial line

'Filius Esto Dei Celum,' &c. (where each word begins with a Sunday letter) is called in the Kalendar of Shepeherdes a verse 'to knowe the letter domynycall' (iii. 14).

l. 10. 'The first year of our solar cycle begins with Sunday letter F (the initial of the word 'Filius'): apply this to the lower part of your second finger (indicis radix), and the E of 'esto' for the following year to the 'root' of your middle finger, and so on. But apply two words (e.g. 'Celum Bonus') to each joint of your little finger (minimi). This finger serves for the double letter of leap-year.'

l. 11. Indicis hanc radix tenet, &c. The diagrams given in some editions of the Computus Manualis, to name the several finger-joints ('iuncturae') of the left hand (e. g. in Brit. Mus. I. A. 41,824, printed by J. de Pré, at Lyons, in 1489), thus define the names:—

I. The open hand, pro parte interiori.

1. The thumb, Pollex. Its joints (from the palm of the hand to the tip, upwards), radix pollicis, supra radix pollicis, summitas pollicis.

2. The forefinger, Index. Its joints, prima radix indicis, secunda supra radix indicis, tertia supra radix indicis, summitas indicis.

3. The middle finger, Medius. Its joints, prima radix medii, secunda supra radix medii, tertia supra radix medii, summitas medii.

4. The ring-finger, Medicus. Its joints, prima radix medici, secunda supra radix medici, tertia supra radix medici, summitas medici.

5. The little finger, Auricularis or Minimus. Its joints, prima radix auricularis, secunda supra radix auricularis, tertia supra radix auricularis, summitas auricularis.

II. The back of the fingers, clenched down, pro parte exteriori.

The first finger, Index. Its back, the joints from the nail to the lower joint prima subungula indicis (next the nail), secunda subungula indicis, and grossa radix indicis. And so, in like manner, prima subungula, secunda subungula, and grossa radix of the back of the three other fingers, medius, medicus, and minimus (or auricularis), the thumb (pollex) not being employed in those diagrams which are constructed 'pro parte exteriori.'

ll. 21-5. 'Fructus, Alit, Canos,' &c. The Kalendar of Shepe-herdes explains that these four memorial lines are an alternative set ('Or, by thys other verses'). It has several misprints, but reads Calor for Color, and Agur for Ar-gos. The latter reading is indifferent. These lines are better than those given in MS. Harl. 955 (Direct. Sac. p. 608), two of which run the changes on the first without any attempt at metre.

The letters run in the lines 'Fructus,' &c.

- (1) F. A. C. E. G. B. D.
- (2) E. G. B. D. F. A. C.
- (3) D. F. A. C. E. G. B.
- (4) CB. ED. GF. BA. DC. FE. AG.

It will be observed that these initials will help one to letter the four (open) fingers, from the root to the tip, and then to go on with the same finger doubled for the letters which I give in italics, from the nail to the lower joint, in continuation. No. (4) gives the letters for the little finger (the leap-years), the second syllable in each supplying the second letter of each pair in that instance, for use for the latter part of the year from St. Matthias' Day, onwards.

ll. 26-30. The rule for Leap-year.

ll. 31-5. A rule for finding the cycle position of any year in the present millenary. From the number of the year A.D. subtract eight, then divide by twenty-eight, and you will find that the remainder gives the place in the solar cycle of the year in question.

ll. 36-44. A ready-reckoning for the above without going through the entire process, starting with Anno Domini 1400.

ll. 45-8. Concurrents: G. A. B. C. D. E. F.

The Leofric Missal (p. 22, ed. Warren) has a table of Regulares, Feriae, Concurrentes et Epactae written in the south of England, cir. A. D. 970. (De Computo Ecclesiastico: pro singulis mensibus.)

The 'concurrent' is a number corresponding to the Sunday letter. In old style, add to the numeral of the given year its integral fourth part + 4, and divide by 7. The remainder is the 'concurrent.' (In the twentieth and twenty-first centuries new style, proceed in the same way, only adding 5, instead of 4.) The numbers assigned in the memorial verses to the letters are

A. B. C. D. E. F. G. 6. 5. 4. 3. 2. 1. 7.

A concurrent is the supernumerary day (or in leap-year two days) over and above the fifty-two full weeks of each year. Durandus thus arranges the 'concurrents' of a solar cycle of twenty-eight ll. 49-51. Sunday letter F. is the first in a solar cycle. E. in the second year; and so on. Therefore the concurrents, 1, 2, &c., attach themselves to them. Durandus gives for the dominical letters—

'Fert* Ea Dux Cor Amet* Gens Fautor Eum Coluit* Bis Ars Genus Est* De Corde Bono Gignit* Ferus Ensis Dicta Beant* Aqua Gens, Frons Dat.* Cunctis Bonus Auctor.'

- * Note that the words ending with 't' are bissextile (Rat. Divin. VIII. v. 8). We have marked them with asterisks.
- 1. 52. 'Regulars' are used with 'Concurrents' to find on what day of the week the first of each month will fall. 'Solar regulars' are invariable numbers attached to every month. These are thus given in our Latin lines:—

Mar. Apr. May. June. Jul. Aug. Sep. Oct. Nov. Dec. Jan. Feb.

5. I. 3. 6. I. 4. 7. 2. 5. 7. 2. 5.

Add the regulars of the given month to the concurrents of the year in question. Then, if not more than seven, it marks the day of the week on which your month begins. Or if it is more than seven, then subtract seven to find it. Leap-years change at Feb. 25, therefore you start afresh for the concurrents and solar regular to find the first of March. (Lunar regulars begin with nine, and, added to the epact, give the day of the week of the first in each month. See Portio ii.)

Another memorial rule is the following:-

¹ Dux est Aprilis in asse: April leads the way, with unity (1) for its regularis.

Quinque Nouember habet: septem December adauget

Ianus tres rapuit: Februus sex modo † recepit.

(See Hampson, Kal. Medii Aevi, ii. 334; where also another set of lines is given ('September quinis: October consocialis,' &c., for the use of those who began their Lunar Year in September.)

1, 58,

E. A. C. F. A. D. G. B. E. G. C. F.

This line 'Est Astris,' &c. (wherein the initial letters A-G stand for the numerals 1-7) is given likewise by Durandus (Rationale Divinorum, VIII. v. 5). It gives the solar regulars (5. 1. 3, &c.) as in the previous note for the months, beginning with March.

l. 60. The names of the twelve months.

l. 62. The Latin equivalent to our 'Thirty days hath September,' &c. (Cf. Durandi Rat. VIII. iv. 13.)

1. 67. The names of the seven planets known to the ancients. (Cf. Durandi Rationale, VIII. v. 3.)

ll. 68-71. The Latin equivalent (virtually) for our rhyme,

Durandus has a rather longer version of these lines (Rat. Div. VIII. iv. 19).

ll. 72-4. 'Tantum tendebat,' &c. In this memoria technica, the letter T, the nineteenth letter of the alphabet, stands for xix; Q for xvj; R for xvij, and S for xviij. Thus we get the highest number of the days post idus mensis, ante kalendas mensis sequentis for the twelve months in this order, xix. xix. xvi. xvij. xviij. xvij. xviij. xvij. xix. xviij. xviij. xviij.

ll. 75-6. Est Aries, Taurus.—The original of 'The Ram, the Bull, the Heavenly Twins,' &c., for the signs of the Zodiac for the months of the year. Cf. Durandi Rationale Divinorum, VIII. iii. 5.

1. 77. 'Semper quindenis,' &c.—'Sol in Ariete' is to be placed in the almanac opposite xv. Kal. April (March 18), 'Sol in Tauro' opposite xv. Kal. Maii (April 17), and so forth.

ll. 78-80. 'A. B. C. sunt extra,' &c. A rule for attaching Sunday letters to the three joints of every finger of the closed hand. 'G supra' means that we must place 'G' at the tip of each finger of the open hand, and 'D. E. F. manet infra ' i.e. on the lower joints of the open hand, D being on the 'radices' or lowest joints within the palm, as the figure shows 1.

ll. 81-3. 'A-Dam De-GeBat,' &c., the original of

'At Dover Dwells George Brown Esquire,'

to help us remember the dominical letters A, D, D, G, B, E, &c., wherewith the several months respectively begin. Durandus gives the same (Rat. Divin. VIII. v. 4), but adds an alternative.

'Alta Domat Dominus, Gratis Beat, Equa Gerentes, Contemnit Fictos, Augebit Dona Fideli.'

ll. 84-6. 'Iuncturis,' &c. This is intended to show how we may attach the above-mentioned syllables ('A-dam De-Gebat,' &c.) to the joints of the hand. But I do not think the diagram for it is given by Kyrfoth, though perhaps the 'A. B. C.' hand would serve the purpose.

ll. 87-93. The Cisioianus for Oxford Use. A couplet of about thirty syllables is given (a syllable for each day) for every month, so constructed as to show what fixed holy days occur². Thus—

(ll. 94-5). 'Ci-si-o Ia-nus E-pi, Lu-ci-a-nus et Hil.'

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13.

gives a memorial for thirteen days. 'The (Circum)cision on the first of January, E-pi(phany) on the sixth, and Lucian and Hilary on the eighth and thirteenth respectively,' and so on.

I have rearranged the holy days noted in kalendar form on pp. 121-32, above. The words here given in italics ' \tilde{p} .,' 'le. fe,' 'non dis,' 'non le,' &c., are in the original printed beneath the syllables corresponding to the days to which they are assigned as the reader will see on pp. 166-8.

They indicate the academical character of the days in the University of Oxford. There, as at Paris and at Cambridge, the ordinary days of term were styled 'dies legibiles' or 'le days,' i. e. days on which lectures might be delivered, and 'dis days' or 'dies disputabiles,' when the more solemn disputations of the Masters of Arts were held, at which all senior sophisters were compelled to attend ³. These disputations (says Dr. Peacock) were preceded by Dysses or Disserta-

Statut. Acad. Cantabr. 339. According to the Elizabethan Statutes, cap. 25, the disputations lasted from 9 to 11 a.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, unless some feast day intervened, and were attended by all M.A.'s.

tions, and such days were thence also called 'Dys days 1.' The first entry from Bedell Matthew Stokys' book is, 'The Questionists shall gyve the Bedels warnynge upon the Le Daye, that they may proclayme before thordynarie Readers in the common Schooles thentrynge of their Questions [the Priorums] at the accustomed Hower 2.

There were in old times many holy days which intervened to stop lectures, and these were accordingly called non Le, or non Dis days (or both at once).

At Oxford and Paris (Dr. Peacock might have added Cambridge) there was the further distinction that there was a sort of intermediate class, called 'le fe days,' or 'dies legibiles festinanter's. On these, according to one explanation, 'cursory lectures' on the Ethics of Aristotle were delivered. Dr. Peacock says that cursory lectures were delivered on Sundays and at certain seasons of the year. The days thus marked in our Oxford Computus of 1520 are-

3 This is the common reading. I have been inclined to suggest 'festine' (for 'festive'), and I see that 'Festive' is the reading of the Paris kalendars edited by MM. Denisse and Chatelain. See, however, my note (2) on p. 27, above. I do not know whether the word 'festine' was in use among mediaeval writers. There is, I believe, a question as to the reading in Cicero (4 Att. 14), Nizolius cites it as 'Soles enim festive odorari,' apparently not finding such a form as 'festine' in Tully. The Paris Statute of 1254 (Bulaeus, iii. 280) speaks merely of the abusc by some M.A.'s, 'lectiones suas terminare festinantibus antequam librorum quantitas requireret.'

4 We note coincidences in the Paris and Cambridge kalendars.

There is no reason to think that any 'le fe' day was marked there.

St. Nicholas, 6 Dec. Conception of B. Mary, 8 Dec. (The morrow, Cam.). St. Lucy, 13 Dec. (Paris, Cam.).

The distinction between 'ordinary' and 'extraordinary' or 'cursory' lectures is discussed by Mr. Mullinger in an appendix to his History of the University of Cambridge, i. 645-8. He adopts M. Thurot's explanation that ordinary lectures were those of Masters, delivered according to the regulations of the statutes and ordinances, while cursory lectures were delivered by bachelors in the faculty of arts as substitutes for the masters, being practically the same as 'extraordinary' readers. 'Legere festinanter' (festive) was known or recognized at Cambridge, and belonged not only to the more mercurial schools of Paris and Oxford. It is supposed to be the custom of reading so quickly that the hearers cannot take down their notes.

l. 102. 'Frede(wyde)':—St. Frideswyde's 'Invention' was kept locally, at Oxford, on May 15. Her 'Depositio' occurs usually on October 19, and her 'Translatio' on February 11 (or 12).

l. 107. The academical notes, presumably attached to one line, have been cut away by the binder—for July 17-31. I have restored them (in brackets) from notes given in the Proctor's Books, &c.

¹ The other 'festive' days at Paris were SS. Polycarp (Jan. 26), George (Apr. 23), German (May 28), Victor (July 21), Marcellus of Paris (July 26), German of Auxerre (July 31), Gregory Cam. (Sept. 3), Morrow of Holy Cross (Sept. 15), Firmin (Sept. 25), Cosmas and Damian (Sept. 27), Ludger (Oct. 2), Leonard (Nov. 6), Octave of St. Katharine (Dec. 2), and Barbara (Dec. 4).

The Cambridge Proctor's Book gives the Morrow of Ascension, the Morrow of Corpus Christi, St. Dunstan (May 19), St. Alban (June 22), the Morrow of St. John Baptist (June 25), Commem. of St. Paul (or Morrow of the Apostles (June 30), Martin (July 4), Pope Stephen (Aug. 2), Hippolytus (Aug. 13), Augustin (Aug. 28), Gregory (Sept. 3), Jerome (Sept. 30);—also Nov. 22 and 28—as 'le fe' days.

As to the syllable 'pre' or 'p.' which marks certain important days in this Oxford Kalendar, and is printed below the several days, I am at a loss how to assign to it its true interpretation or derivation. The days so distinguished are—

Jan. The Circumcision, Epiphany, Conversion of St. Paul.

Feb. St. Peter's Chair.

Mar. St. Gregory, Cuthbert, the Annunciation.

June. St. Barnabas, Nat. Jo. Baptist, St. Peter and Paul the Apostles.

Nov. All Saints, All Souls, SS. Louis, Martin, Edmund Abp. and Confessor, Hugh, Edmund, Clement, Katharine, Andrew.

Dec. St. Nicholas, Conception of B. V. Mary, St. Thomas Ap., Christmas Day, St. Stephen, John, Holy Innocents, and Thomas the Martyr.

Some such expression as 'preces,' or else 'predicandum,' or 'ad predicatores,' may suggest itself. Or, can 'p' have been used conventionally at Oxford as a convenient symbol for 'principale festum,' or for 'cum processione,' or for 'precedenti die'? No one of these surmises, however, is convincing to us.

ll. 118-22. The kalendars of various liturgical or diocesan Uses require modification of the lines. Thus our third (Oxford) line ends 'Fe-bru-que Sco-last. Fre-de. Va-lent.'

where the Sarum line ends

'Fe-bru-ar, Scho-las-ti-ca Va-lent.'

(Salisbury not having occasion to notice St. Frideswyde) 1.

In March, Sarum has Perpetua for Thomas, and omits St. Patrick. Vitalis on April 28, for Peter of Milan on the 29th (Oxon.). In May the Sarum verses disregard John of Beverley and Frideswyde, great names at Oxford, as well as the later saints Dominick and Francis. In other months St. Rock and the later festivals of the Transfiguration and Most Holy Name, and translation of St. Osmund, with some others are not found in the corresponding Sarum lines. In November 'Qua[tuor coronati] Theo[dore]' take the place of Lodowicus 2. I have given memorial couplets of the saints in each month from other sources in my appendix ii to Directorium sacerdotum ii. pp. 605-6. See also Hampson, Kalendarium, i. 397-420; 449-60.

ll. 123-6. The lunar cycle consists of a series of nineteen years to which golden numbers i-xix are attached.

ll. 128-9. 'Dant centum mille,' &c. On the division of 100 (years) by 19 (the number in the lunar cycle), there is a remainder of 5. Likewise a remainder of 12 on dividing 1000; or of 3 on dividing 1400. Probably the rule given in our text was made in the fifteenth century.

ll. 130-34. Memorial lines for the order of golden numbers (found by additions of 8 or subtractions of 11, so as never to exceed 19), as they are placed in the margin of the almanac against the days of the month in the kalendar. Disyllables imply that there is a blank left between two consecutive numbers.

Ter-nus vn-din-nod. oc-to sed. quin-que tred. am-bo de-cem doc. iij. — xj. — xix. viij — xvj. v. — xiij. ij. — x. — xviij. 'sed.'=sedecim. doc.=decimus octauus 'duc' (or 'dud' as in Manuale, 1523) stands for duodecim. 'deps' (or 'dest,' 1523; 'sep' Harl. 955) means dix-sept, or decem et septem. The last syllable should be 'quat,' i. e. quatuordecim, as in line 140. The Kalendar of Shepeherdes (iii. 14), which has the last words in a corrupt form ('io-ta. veni. v. î. quat.') calls these lines the rule 'to knowe the letter domynycall and the golden number.'

ll. 135-41. The rule for adapting the aforesaid series of golden numbers to the hand diagram, 'Minim,' 'pol,' 'rad' (or 'ra'), stand for minimus, pollex, and radix, the little finger, the thumb, the root or palm-joint, &c. &c.

ll. 142-4. The rule for arranging the names of the months on the second and other fingers.

ll. 145-6. For the 'prime' or new moon, and the age of the moon. ll. 147-8. To find the prime by the joints of the hand, and the memorial lines.

ll. 149-51. I suppose this rule corresponds with the arrangement of golden numbers in the margin of the kalendar, or the clogalmanac, when a larger number stands, not next, but next but one (tercio ordine) to the smaller one preceding it, subtracting eleven from the last number so as never to exceed nineteen, or adding eight, where it is possible.

l. 151. 'Sed facienda locis. Hic ponit actor exceptiones et primo ponit instantias siue exceptiones in vi. mensibus paribus.' (i. e. Feb. 3; Apr. 6; June 4; Aug. 2; Oct. 3; and Dec. 4.) 'Secundo ponit alias sex, factas in sex vltimis mensibus.' Pynson.

Il. 152-3. In the epacts for the last year of the lunar cycle of nineteen years, the number xii is used in place of xi, so that there may be 210 epacts instead of 209, to make the lunar approximate the solar cycle. This is called the 'Moon's Leap,' taking place on July 30, on SS. Abdon and Sennen's day, 'locus saltus lunae', which is then reckoned as the first lunation instead of the thirtieth; and on Aug. 1 is the thirtieth lunation instead of the second (Hampson, Medii Aevi Kal. ii. 112). 'Bla, si, nus, Steph, ore, iunge' apparently indicates Feb. 3, Apr. 4, June 2, Aug. 3, Oct. 2, and Dec. 1, the days of SS. Blaise, Ambrosius, Marcellinus, Stephani papæ, Leodegarii, and Eligii. Alcuin wrote several letters, cir. 797-8 (Epp. 76, 82, 84, 86), and six Problemata, de Saltu lunae.

Locus saltus (secundum Romanos) is marked in some of the Kalendars printed by Hampson (Medi Aevi Kal. i. 428, 430, 432, 459) and the twelfth-century Kalendar at Jesus Coll., Cambridge.

July 30-31

Nov. 24 or 25.

Sep. 24 (?)

Jan. 22.

'Luna facit saltum Quintilis luce suprema' says Durandus, Rat. VIII. x. 5, i. e. on July 31.

ll. 154-5. Rule 'pro situatione,' i.e. to teach what blank days are omitted after subtracting a golden number in the series of nineteen (see note on lines 130-4) in certain months because alternate lunar months are 'hollow' (cavi), i.e. consisting of twenty-nine days instead of thirty. The lines, being more correctly given thus are sufficient to state that there is no blank day before golden number xj. (vndecim) in February; viij. (octo) in [A]pril, June, or August; v. (quinque) in October, and ij. (ambo) in December. This will be seen in the left-hand margin of any Old Style Kalendar which marks the golden numbers. The 'hollow' lunar months of twenty-nine days are Feb. Apr. June, Aug. Oct. and December.

'Est sine din Febru.; sine to 'pril, Iunius, Augu.; October sine que; bo vultque December abesse,'

l. 156. 'Sex [Forsan leg. 'Sed'] alie resident in fex [leg. 'sex'] facte prope finem.' The other (six) exceptions remain, made into six, in the latter months (July, &c.).

ll. 156-8. Compare the lines from the York Pye, pro numero aureo: 'Ternis. vn. din. nod. octo.' &c. Also the Regula de eodem: 'Fe. din. non dico. nec April to.' &c., printed in Directorium Sacerdotum ii. 609, with Mr. Lunn's notes, on p. 610 (din = undecim; to = octo &c. &c., as explained in our note on line 153). Also compare the elucidation given by Durandus, Rat. Div. VIII. xi. 3, on the cryptic line—

'Mense brevis lunae Februs est ars dat cito gan-ger.'

l. 158. 'Nos non debemus dicere Un. din. nod. sed vn. nod. din.: quia non est curandum quando luna primatur per alium numerum quam nouemdecim [i.e. 'nod.']: quia tot accipimus iuncturas dicendo vn. nod. din., sicut dicendo vn. din. nod.' Gloss. in Bodl. Auct. iv. Q. v. 50. (1488), &c.

ll. 159-64. To reckon the (lunar) epacts and golden numbers on the thumb of the left hand. Durandus speaks of this system in Rationale Divinorum, VIII. ix. 3. Divide the given year of our Lord by nineteen. Take the remainder and count it on the three joints of the thumb. If it ends up on the first joint, subtract one from the number (the previous remainder). If it ends upon the middle joint, add nine. If on the third joint, add nineteen. The result in each case will be the epact.

ll. 165-7. On the lunar 'regulares' see Durandi Rationale Divinorum, VIII. viii. 2. He gives the line

'Dic E. G. bis, I. K. bis; et post manet ordo.' The lunar year beginning in September, assign E=5 for the regulars of Sept. and Oct. Give G = 7 to Nov. and Dec., I = 9 to Jan. and Feb., K = 10 to March and April; and then 'manet ordo,' i.e. May, June, July and August will go on without skipping over any number, with 11, 12, 13 and 14 for their respective lunar 'regulares.'

ll. 168-71. Mensis: Pynson. 'Numerus variabilis datus mensi ad inueniendum etatem lune in principio cuius est regularis lunaris in quolibet anno... est numerus (xxx non excedens) qui iunctus cum epacta manifestat etatem lune cuiuslibet mensis anni, &c. Ad habendum originem regularium lunarium diuidendus est annus solaris per xii., quantum potest, et facta diuisione remanent quinque, ita quod quinque, sunt pro regulari lunari, vel primo mense, scilicet in Septembri, qui est primus mensis apud Egyptiacos.' Almanach Ephemerides, 1506-7.

ll. 172-5. In the nineteen years of the lunar cycle there are twelve 'common' years. The other seven are 'embolismal,' viz. the 3rd, 6th, 8th, 11th, 14th, 17th and 19th of the reformed kalendar. See Hampson, Kal. Medii Aevi, ii. 110. Durandus gives the memorial line for this:—

Cur Fles Has Lacrimas Odiosum Quaere Tyrannum.

(Rat. Div. VIII. x. 2.)

ll. 176-8. The embolismal or intercalated lunations of thirty days (that of the last or nineteenth year of the Metonic Cycle being apparently of only twenty-nine days) were, and are, introduced to make Paschal Term occur not before March 21. In Old Style they came at the end of those years in the cycle which had the golden numbers ij. v. vij. x. xiij. xvj. and xviij. The 'common' year has twelve new moons, but the 'embolismal' has an uneven number, thirteen. An 'uneven' lunar month is the mensis cavus reckoned as twenty-nine days. (See note on lines 154-5.) Durandus, Rat. Div. VIII. vii, says that Feb., April, &c., are called the even months because they count by even numbers from January.

ll. 179-81. This memorial line is given in the York Pye¹ in the following form:—

'Mobilis ibo cifos ace liber habeto coeuum.'

The initials M. i. c. a. l. h. c. answer to the numbers 12.9.3.1.11.8.3. both of the year's alphabet, and of the lunations in the seven embolismal years of the metonic cycle, viz. those noted on lines 172-5. From line 181,

'Prima dabit mensem, monstrabit et altera sedem,' we learn that each word stands for an embolismal lunation in one of the seven embolismal months. The initial letters, M. I., &c., show in which month of the year in question the embolismal month will be. See Durandus, Rationale, VIII. x. 3, who gives a different line with somewhat different import ('E' and 'Modo' giving us 5 and 12 instead of 9 and 1).

'Mobilis Et Christum Modo Liber Habeto Coeuum.'

Il. 182-92. The 'claves terminorum festorum mobilium' are 19 in number, and here run (at intervals) between 11 and 40. The numbers here stated are 25, 13, 30, 19, 7, to be adapted to the five fingers (pol[lex, in[dex], medius, medi[cus], and minimus). The rule seems to be—

'Ascertain the golden number of your year. Look above that number for the clavis. Then find the word clavis of the movable feast, as it is set in the kalendar, and count down from it as many days as the numeral which you found in your tabula clavium. Then the nearest Sunday after that point will be the Sunday for the required feast.'

ll. 185-6. See the explanation of these lines by Durandus, Rat. Div. VIII, xii, 2.

ll. 190-1. If you want to find Septuagesima or Quadragesima in a leap-year, you must add a unit to the clavis which you ascertain; and if this brings you to Feb. 24, then you must subtract one.

ll. 197–8. These lines appear thus (less metrically) in the Sarum Manuale, 1523¹. 'Primula G. Iani, supremaque; G.-que secunda Martis; et Aprilis G. tertia, G.-que secunda.'

They imply that the first Sunday letter G. in Jan. (Jan. 7) gives Claves Septuagesimae last ,, G. in ,, (Jan. 28) ,, Claves Quadragesimae second ,, G. in March (Mar. 11) gives Claves Paschae third ,, G. in April (Apr. 15) gives Claves Rogationum last ,, G. ,, (Apr. 29) ,, Claves Pentecostes. ll. 199–203. The earliest date for Septuagesima, Quadragesima, Pascha, Rogationum, Pentecostes is on St. Prisca. 'Febru' cras Benedicti cras Marci Nicolai transl. cras Jan. 18. Feb. 8. Mar. 21. Apr. 26. May 10. (see line 96).

In Harl. 955 the regula pro festis ends 'Pris.-bru. ne -ci. Gor. dato sedem.'

This shows first that in our Oxford line 'no,' which puzzled me, may be a misprint for 'ne,' as 'Be-ne-dicti' represents March 20-22 in our 106th line. Secondly, the fact that the Kalendar of Shepeherdes, 1506 (iii. 16), reads 'Io. latin. nic. gor [gonii]' where our Oxford book has (for May 6-10) 'Io. beuerlacen,' illustrates those 'variations of use' to which reference was made in lines 119-23, above.

ll. 200-2. 'Radix indicis' is the bottom joint (within the palm) of the forefinger. 'Domini lux,' &c. The Sunday following will be the festival required.

ll. 203-6. Easter cannot fall earlier than March 22, nor later than April 25. St. Matthias Day is on the second (intercalated) F. vi Kal. Mart. (bis-sext) in a leap-year; and, if that be a Saturday, it is transferred to Monday. This rule is given in the Sarum Pye under 2 G, though not under 1 G. (See Direct. Sacerd. ii. 494, 506.)

Il. 207-11. 'Quilibet A. dat vnam ebdomadam, et conuertendo dies non debemus computare A. indicis, quia est ebdomada... Quelibet iunctura non tacta retro A. indicis, nisi tangamus A. indicis mouet, i. e. remouet, vnam diem. Et nota quod iuncture pollicis non computantur hic... Pynson.

Il. 213-15. From Whitsunday to St. John. 'Debemus ponere sex ebdomadas supra G. indicis, postea debemus inuenire festum mobile post aureum numerum anni de quo querimus, et quot erunt iuncture vsque ad festum mobile, tot dies habemus remouere ab aliis vi. ebdomadis: si vero festum sit citra G. indicis, tot debemus addere dies cum illis sex ebdomadis, quot sunt iuncture, citra G. indicis, et sic ista regula contraria est regule precedenti.' Pynson.

ll. 215-21. 'Nota quod xxix ebdomade possunt esse a pentecoste vsque ad aduentum Domini, et non plures, sed bene pauciores. Si penthecostes sit prope festum B. Iohannis bapt. tunc sunt pauciores septimane a penthecoste vsque ad Aduentum Domini, vnde semper a Nat. B. Io. Bapt. sunt: xxii. septimane cum .V. diebus ... xxix. ebdomade volunt poni supra A. indicis; sed quelibet B. ab illa A. vsque ad festum mobile remouet vnam septimanam, non curando de diebus. Pynson.

ll. 222-7. The four seasons, spring, summer, &c., are thus said to begin on St. Peter's Chair (Feb. 22), St. Urban (May 25), Symphorian (Aug. 22), and St. Clement (Nov. 23), respectively. This is more concisely expressed in the old lines—

'Dat Clemens 1 hyemem: dat Petrus ver, cathedratus:

Estuat Vrbanus: autumnat Bartholomeus.'

(St. 'Bartholomew, Brings the cold dew,' on Aug. 24, not the 22nd according to this version.)

Il. 228-30. The last of these lines for Ember weeks, the 'quattuor tempora' or 'angariae' as they are here called, as Bede had called them², from the service of a messenger or äyyapos, is unsatisfactory as it omits the week which follows Ash Wednesday (properly designated by 'Cineres' in the previous couplet). 'Pen.', or 'carismata dya,' indicates the pentecostal or Whitsun ember week, preparatively to the Trinity ordinations. Cru(x) and Luci(a) give Holy Cross day (the Exaltation, Sept. 14), and St. Lucy's day (Dec. 13) which regulate the other 'church quarter days,' as Abp. Benson used to call the Ember days. Another version is:—

Durandus says:-

'Vult Crux, Lucia, cineres, charismata dia, Vt det vota pia, quarta sequens feria.'

Rat. Divin, VIII. iii. 22.

'After bran, pen, cro, lucy, the embrynge dayes is set for every man to fast.' Kalendar of Shepeherdes (iii. 15).

We have explained 'bran[dones]' on p. 156, above. See also our footnote on ll. 254-6, below.

ll. 230-33. Days of Fasting are Christmas Eve, Whitsun Eve, St. John's Eve, and the Vigils of St. John and the Assumption. Also those of the Letania Maior (St. Mark's), SS. Peter, Andrew, Paul, Simon and Jude, and Matthew.

ll. 235-7. The dies aegri or aegyptiaci are unlucky days (according

'Festum Clementis hyemis caput est orientis. Cedit hyems retro, cathedrato Symone Petro. Ver fugat Vrbanus: Aestatem, Symphorianus. Id tibi quod restat Autumni tempora praestat.'

Rationale Divinorum, VIII. iii. 21.

⁸ Bedae Opera, i. 266 (fol. Basil. 1563). 'Angariae were carriages drawn by post-horses; or obligations to provide such horses' (Hampson, Kal. Medii Aevi, ii. 14). Mabillon (Iter Germanicum) says that the Germans paid their taxes (which were similarly obligatory) quarterly, and accordingly gave the name 'angariae' to the quarterly ember days, when the taxes were due. (Veterum Analecta, p. 14.) Cf. Synod. Wigorn., A.D. 1240. Spelman's Concilia, ii. 259.

to the wisdom of the Egyptians). There are two in each month (so that there are twelve words, reading 'abies' for 'ab eis' in the memorial distich), one counted from the beginning and one from the end of the month, specified in the familiar lines:—

'Prima dies mensis, et septima truncat ut ensis,' &c. frequently prefixed to Januarius, &c., in old kalendars². 'Septima' here indicates January 25, i.e. the seventh day reckoning upwards from Jan. 31. In our distich the first word 'Augurio' does duty for the line just quoted, for the first month, January, a and g being respectively the 1st and the 7th letter.

Each month-word is so constructed as to contain two syllables (at least), and the first letter of each of the two syllables is given its numerical value. Au-Gurio thus indicates the first day from the beginning and the seventh day from the end of the first month, which were supposed to be avoided as unlucky for blood-letting, &c. In like manner, for February, 'De-Cies' (or Di-Ces) indicates the number 4 (from the beginning) and 3 from the end of that month, as the line runs: 'Quarta subit mortem: prosternit tercia fortem.' And so with the rest, as I have explained in Directorium Sacerdotum, ii. 621-3. With the Computus of 1523 it would be better to read 'lu-mine' (for 'nomine') as answering to 'Denus et undenus est mortis vulnere plenus' in April. ('abies' is better than 'ab eis' for August, as it is undesirable to devote two words to one month.) The Computus of 1523, &c., reads 'fer-cula' (which is wrong) for November. Durandus gives 'ex-cute'; but our 'es-cula' amounts to the same result.

l. 238. 'Omnibus in reliquis,' &c., i. e. never drop your h's except in this reckoning of letters for numerals, where a-g=1-7; i, k, l, m, n=8-12; o, p, q=13, 14, 15. The entire alphabet would not supply sufficient numerating letters for a month of thirty days or so, but this device of counting from each end enables us to make shift with fifteen letters (the sixteenth day of a thirty-one-day month being, happily, never unlucky), and the system has the advantage of corresponding with the retrograde counting in the latter part of the monthly lines, 'Prima dies mensis,' &c. The result given is that the Dies aegri are Jan. 1 and 25; Feb. 4 and 26; Mar. 1 and 28; Apr. 10 and 20; May 3 and 25; June 10 and 16; July 13 and 22; Aug. 1 and 30; Sept. 3 and 21; Oct. 2 and 22; Nov. 5 and 28; and Dec. 7 and 22.

² See (e.g.) pp. 46, 68.

Il. 239-40. Following the hint to discard 'H,' and making a two-fold alphabet of a decad apiece (A-G, I, K, L = I-7, 8, 9, I0; and M-X = I-I0), by using only two letters near the beginning of each word in the memorial couplet, I get a series of numerals so nearly approaching the tenor of the lines at the bottom of the months in the Missale Romanum of I474 ('Prima parit bellum: sed quinta dat hora flagellum,' &c.), that I have little doubt that our couplet indicates unlucky hours in the dies Egyptiaci. They seem to be as follows: in Jan. I, 5; Feb. 8, I0; Mar. I, 2; Apr. I(?); May 6, I0; June (?), 4; July (?); Aug. I, 7; Sept. 3, 4; Oct. 5(?); Nov. (?), 4; Dec. I, 6.

ll. 239-40. 'Menfalus illud habet,' &c. These lines (as Pynson explains) contain twelve words, one for each month. The first letter of each word indicates the hour in which God sent a plague upon the Egyptians, in the first half of the month. The first letter of the second syllable of the same word shows the hour in which God sent the plague in the end of the month. Thus the word 'Men-falus' gives the twelfth and sixth letters of the alphabet to show that it was in the twelfth hour of one day (Jan. 1, as we know from 'Prima dies mensis,' or from the word 'Au-gurio'), and in the sixth hour of a day late in the month (viz. the seventh from the end: 'septima truncat vt ensem, or 'gurio'). And so on. These lines imply that there were twenty-four plagues of Egypt. The Jewish Rabbis reckon that there were forty or fifty plagues in Egypt, and two hundred at the Red Sea, as they multiply each of the Ten Plagues by four or five, because the Everlasting (Blessed is He) sent upon them four (or five) chastisements with each of the ten plagues, viz. his anger (and wrath), indignation, and trouble, and sent evil angels among them. (Psalm lxxviii. 49, 50.) Also they observe that the hand (Exod. xiv. 31) is equivalent to five times the finger of God (Exod. viii. 19). See Service for the Two Nights of Passover, 8vo, 1832-3, p. 15. (Ashkenazic Ritual, Haggadah.)

Pynson hereupon says: 'Quod autem sint .x. plage principales patet per hos versus:—

Prima rubens vnda: ranarum plaga secunda. Inde culex tristis: punisca notantur in¹ istis. Quinta pecus sternit, sed viscera sexta crepauit². Inde subit grando: post brucus dente nephando Nona tegit solem: paruam tegit vltima prolem.'

ll. 241-5. The York Pye of 1509-10 defines the Indiction as 'a space of fifteen years, or three lustra, devised by the Romans,' and adds the lines:—

Per te quinque solet indiccio tota notari.

Ter quinos Domini (quotiens potis) aufer ab annis.

Quod, tribus adiunctis, manet est indiccio presens.

Similarly Durandus in Rat. Divin. VIII. v. 9 gives the lines:

Si tribus adiunctis Domini diuiseris annos, Per te, quinque, datur indictio certificata.

'To find the Indiction, add 3 to the numeral of the year in question. Divide by 15, and the remainder is the Indiction.' The Imperial Indiction (formerly noted in this country) began on Sept. 24, viz. '4+3 days before October 1,' as the Latin line says. Pynson explains that the indiction was a period of fifteen years, or three lustra, devised by the Romans so as to tax the subjects of the empire at the end of each lustrum for these several purposes: (1) to pay for armour, (2) for paying troops, and (3) to replenish the public treasury. Our Lord's Nativity took place three years after the beginning of an Indiction. 'Indictio renouatur singulis annis .vii. diebus ("quattuor et tribus") ante Octobrem, h.e. 24 Sept.'

l. 243. 'Dant centum gentos.' Si diuiseris annos ab incarnatione Domini per .xv., adiunges iii. annos his predictis, inditio, i.e. illud spacium temporis sit presens. De mille [annis] diuisis per .xv., remanent .x.; et ex centum, diuisis per .xv., remanent gentes, hoc est, decem. Pynson. (I suppose the form gentos, or gentes, was deduced from 'vi-ginti,' 'tri-ginta,' &c.)

ll. 246-53. The 'littera tabularis.' For the understanding of the kalendar 'the Mayster Sheparde,' next to the golden number and Sunday letter, mentions as requisite 'the letter tabuler in the whiche lyeth all the chefe knowledge of this kalender.

'For the whiche letter and noumber, to vnderstonde that that they wolde, whether it be past or to come, ye shall put 3 fygures after the kalender, of the whiche the fyrste shall shewe the valure and declaracyon of the two other.

'And it is to be vnderstande that in foure yeres there is one bysext, the whiche hath one daye more then the other; and also, as two Latters Dominycals [i. e. Sunday letters] sygned in one of the foresayde fygures and chaunges the letter daye of saynt mathewe [read 'Mathye'], as the whiche vigyll is put with the day vpon the one letter by hymselfe.' Kalender of the Shepeherdes, iii. 13. The 'exposycyon, valour and sygnyficacyon of the letters of the tabular fygure' is printed as a table on p. 33, and 'the fygure to fynde the lettre tabulare,' on p. 34 of the third part (i.e. the text of 1506) of the book just mentioned. In the former there are thirty-five lines to the table (as there are thirty-five sections in the Pye, or thirty-five days on which Easter may fall in five weeks from March 22 to April 25). The first column consists of an italic series of Sunday letters recurring (starting, and ending likewise, with D). The next column consists of a series of 'Tabuler lettres,' viz. the black alphabet from b to v, followed by a to r, perhaps intended to be metrical. The rest of the table shows on what day certain movable feasts fall, the intervals between them, and the day of the week on which Christmas Day will occur.

l. 250. 'Terminat in q.' The 'tabular letters' are continued (but only to the extent of three columns) one line further to d.r. xxij. in the Kalendar of Shepeherds (iii. 33). But as this line (the thirty-sixth) is not carried through, this also may be said to 'end up with q' (not r).

ll. 254-6. In the second column these 'tabular letters' mark octaves (or weeks), b-n-v-g-o. (p and q follow in this second, or rubricated, alphabet to conclude the table, unless r be included.) The former, or black, alphabet ends with v (r, v, v) being discarded), and is followed by v0 of the 'second' (or v1 alphabet.

But why does 'b' at the outset of the column of tabular letters 'give six weeks'?

'Hic docet auctor valorem alphabetorum, dicens quod B. primi allphabeti est littera tabularis: habemus in illo anno vi. ebdomadas et iii dies inter natiuitatem Domini et brandones¹, quando F. septem, quando N. octo, quando U nouem, et iste litere sunt primi alphabeti; quando G. secunda, i. e. littera G. secundi alphabeti est littera tabularis, habemus x., quando O, xi [ebdomadas]. Et sic habemus litteras principales tabulares, quarum quattuor sunt primi alphabeti, scilicet B. F. N. et U, et due secundi, viz. G. et O. Alie autem littere, sequentes istas litteras principales, addunt tot dies quot sunt littere post litteram principalem: quando aliqua littera non principalis est tabularis, tunc sunt tot septimane a natiuitate Domini vsque ad

Preliminary Note to the Ancient Kalendar of Paris.

In the following passage Ant. Wood points out the connexion between the Oxford Kalendar and that of Paris:—

'Hearing and Reading used then (when this form was prescribed) to be on festival days, which our antiquated statutes seldom admit, as the ancient Calendars before them direct; wherein the days of the year are distinguished by Le, and non Le, dis and non dis, and le. fe. that is "dies legibiles and non legibiles, disputabiles and non disputabiles, and dies legibiles festinanter." And as I have observed Le and dis days seldom or never point to festival days, because that those were appointed for uses of religion and recreation. But howsoever it was, the aforesaid form of hearing, admits and numbers festival days, which argues that that way is very ancient, as indeed it is, and if I mistake not, had its original from the University of Paris, divers of whose modes in Reading and Hearing we formerly followed."—Ant. Wood, The Hist. and Antiquities of the University of Oxford, ed. J. Gutch, Oxon. 4°, 1792, i. p. 58.

'Because of the more commodious ordering of Lectures now present, the University thought it necessary, to take away the difference of Le and non Le (Vide Corpus Stat. Univ. Oxon. 4^{to} , ad finem Praefationis) "dierum vero Dis et Non Dis. discrimen iam olim in usu esse desiit (preterquam quoad disputationes quodlibeticas)" supervacuum fere videbatur, aliquot paginas onerare Calendario κατὰ πλάτος expanso; Sufficere igitur visum est, dies non Dis. qui in singulis Terminis occurrunt in sequenti tabella καθ' ὁμάδα exhibere.

KALENDAR OF THE UNIVERSITY OF PARIS

FOURTEENTH TO SIXTEENTH CENTURY

KALENDARIUM AD USUM UNIVERSITATIS PARISIENSIS

The fourteenth-century kalendar of the University of Paris has been edited by Denifle and Chatelain in Chartularium Univ. Parisiensis, vol. ii (appendix), pp. 709–16, in 1891. The text is that of the kalendar of the 'Picard Nation' of students from the fourteenth-century MS. of Bibl. S. Genovefae, E. i. 29. Later insertions (sixteenth century), marked by italics, are further noted (here) by the addition of 'saec. 16.'

Notice also is taken of readings from the following MSS.:— Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, Lat. 12461, saec. xiv exeuntis. Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, Lat. 4831, ante ann. 1452, 'BN'. Arsenal MS. 1121, saec. xv = 'Anl.'

Phillipps MS. 2863.

By kind permission of M. Chatelain, courteously obtained for us by M. L. Delisle, we are enabled to include this interesting document in our appendix by way of illustrating the origin of our English University kalendars ¹.

de trinitate 8 die (sc. mensis Maii) remissione decim[arum] ac primorum fructu[um] pro rege henrico s[exto] exequie dni henrici se[xti or (se)ptimi] regis anglie apud ecci[esiam] beate marie cum omnibus [. . . .].

* K. Henry VI died on May 21, 1471. He had a special devotion for St. Nicholas, whose Translation was on May 9th.

² In the kalendar in MS. Bodl. Digby 15, lf. 102 (which is appended to Computus manualis secundum vsum Cantebrig, quod bernys scripsit, the Algorismus of Alex. de Villa Dei, Tract. De Sphera of J. de Sacrobosco, and Theorica Planetarum by Walter Brit of Merton), there is an entry at June 21, 'd. xj. kal. Dedicator eccl'ie beate marie de eton.' Possibly, of the parish church. A Dedication Feast was kept in the College on June 5 in 1442. J. W. Clark, Archit. Hist. of Cambridge, i. 380. MS. Gonv. Cai. 141, places 'S. Leufridi Conf.' on xj. Kal. Iulii.

¹ These two entries are written in another hand.

² This entry of St. Thomas the Martyr had been erased (probably about Nov. 1538) and was subsequently inked-in again, probably in the first year of 2. Mary. See Burnet's History, Records, bk. iii. No. 61; Gibson Codex, tit. xi, ap. 1, tom. i, p. 259 n.

A COMPARATIVE TABLE

will be soon with your starting of the collection

OF THE

OXFORD, CAMBRIDGE, AND PARIS KALENDARS

IN THE COMPARATIVE TABLE:-

M.= the kalendar formerly belonging to a Member of Magd. Coll. Oxon. (now St. John's Coll. Oxon. MS. 188). Cf. p. 33.

E.=Univ. Oxon. Archiv. E. a MS. written by (or for) G. Darrell, Proctor, 1604 (derived from the fourteenth-century MS.
Chancellor's, or Commissary's Book, A). See p. 35.

K.='Computus Manualis ad usum Oxoniensium,' printed by C. Kyrfoth, 4to, 1519-20, Oxon. (unique copy in Camb. Univ. Library, AB. 4. 69 (5)). See pp. 120-32; 166-8.

Cam. = kalendar in the Senior Proctor's Book of Cambridge University, a late fifteenth-century MS. now at the Registry, Cambridge. See pp. 216-27.

 ϕ = a festival marked in one of the Univ. proctor's books or old kalendars.

 $\delta = Dirige$ of a benefactor, &c., at Oxford.

 $\epsilon = Exequies$ of a benefactor, &c., at Cambridge.

 $\theta =$ 'Obitus' (where service is not specified in the kalendar). $\mu =$ Mass of the Dead, for a benefactor, at Oxford or Paris.

 $[\mu]$ = a Mass (of Requiem, &c.), not specifically mentioned in the Camb. Proctor's Book, but implied by the preceding 'Exequies,' ϵ , and specified in Cambridge Statutes.

Bejan.—See p. 200, n.

Ces. = Cessacio magistrorum regentium. (Cf. pp. 35-8.)

Res. = Resumptio

Congr. = Congregatio Magna at Cambridge.

n. dis. = dies non disputabilis, when there were no exercises.

n. le = dies non legibilis, when there were no public lectures.

le. fe (or le fes) = dies legibilis festine, or festinanter, when special holiday lecture-books were to be read fast. (?) 'festive,' Paris.

(Nat.) or [Nat.] = A festival of one of the Nations at Paris. ord. = ordinarie.

 \tilde{p} . = (?) processio, at Oxford (1519-20). See p. 182, n. proc. = procuratoris, or procuratorum (continuatio or electio).

From the foregoing Table of Comparison the reader will observe that the chief ecclesiastical festivals in the Kalendar (generally speaking 'double feasts,' and often 'red-letter days') were kept as 'non le' holidays in both Universities.

Also that a mass for a benefactor of the University was, generally speaking, likewise a 'non-le' day, preceded by a 'non dis,' in regard to his 'dirge'.

A certain number of saints' days—marked ' (ϕ) '—were not kept as university holidays. The majority of these were feasts of only 'three lessons,' and what we should call only 'black-letter days.' The great similarity of the Oxford and Cambridge non-lecture days is so noticeable that we may with confidence ascribe the origin of both to the OLD KALENDAR of the University of Paris. In the last named we may take notice of the general rule that 'In quocumque festo non legitur, in vigilia non disputatur.' (Kal. Vet. Univ. Paris., add. in mense Ianuario, vide supra, p. 199.)

ADDITIONAL NOTES

Pages 5-6, note 6. On examining the two MSS. at Trinity College, Cambridge (B. 14. 39, lf. 276; B. 15. 38, lf. 148^b meditacio nocturna:—there is a similar hand for meditacio diurna on lf. 149), I observe that they both have a close resemblance to the carved fifteenth-century panel 'Manus meditacionis' in Bishops Cannings Church, Wilts.

In Trin. Coll. Cam. MS. R. 14. 52, after the treatises of Roger Bacon, recipes, &c. A.D. 1458, there occur on lf. 255 certain tables of the kalendar to show the time of day by the shadow, and then on lf. 257, two hands drawn to teach the musical notes or tonic sol-fa.

23. At Trinity College, Cambridge, there is also a good seventeenth-century MANUSCRIPT of the OXFORD UNIVERSITY STATUTES (MS. R. 15. 3). It is a folio of 411 pages measuring 121 ×8 inches. It opens with a Kalendar such as we have printed from Archiv. B. on the uneven-numbered pages from p. 81 to p. 103, above. Then follow the Sequentiae Quatuor Evangeliorum. (See my Salisbury Ceremonies and Processions, 1901, p. 17.) The votive gospel de S. Cruce, for Fridays, ascribed to Alcuin. Missale Sarum, 748*-750*, 'In illo tempore, Ascendens Iesus, Matt. xx. 17-19. After this, 'Translatio Univ. [Oxon.] de loco ad locum. (Printed by Mr. Anstey, Mun. Acad., pp. 367-9, at the beginning of his vol. ii.) Next, the Oxford Statutes, with many marginal notes, as for revision, - 'Superfluum,' 'Antiquatum,' 'Novum,' 'Probatum,' 'Referendum ad personas privilegiatas,'-and with the marks $\psi = Reiecta$; $\infty = mutata$, and references to Archiv. A, B, C, and D. On p. 355 are scribblings, 'This booke wass writt by Dr Heath (?) in the time of Sir Thomas Oseborne nothing ollow then before Charels Cuts, Thomas Cutt. I am sory that Thiss should be so thick. This Robatt from Thomas nocton, . . at (his) high (?) from Noctton, this for John Boswell. Your seruant Robert Boswell. John Boswell, lincolnshier, to Charels Peidgeon.'

'Secretum de emendato Statutorum Exemplari Bibliothecae publicae inserendo. A°. 1617, Iunii 21. N. 47. 1.'

The seventeenth-century transcript of the Kalendar, at the beginning of the volume, agrees pretty closely with Archiv. B., but in the month of January omits the Octave of St. Thomas M., on Jan. 5, and the 'Dirige' at Jan. 21. Feb. 23, omits 'S. Iuliane' (which is struck through in MS. B.). Apr. 19 is marked 'non le.' (cf. p. 87, 'proximo die non legibili post elect.,' &c.). Apr. 23 'Gregorij' (for 'Georgii'). On Apr. 26, 29, there is no notice taken of the Chicheley and Beaufort masses. May 21, 'S. Germani' omitted. On June 15 and 24 'Dirige' omitted. In July, the 'Missa de cessatione Trinitatis' is placed on the 6th as by the corrector in B. On Aug. 6 and 7 no notice is taken of the Transfiguration and Holy Name which are insertions in B. Nov. 12, 'de Gray' for 'le Grey.' Nov. 24, 'Crysogoni' (for 'Grysogoni,' B.). Dec. 5 'pro requie' (for 'de Requie,' B.). Dec. 29, S. Thomas Abp. M. is not noted. (Erased in B.)

68-79. Obliterated passages, marginalia, &c., in the 'Chancellor's Book,' MS, Archiv. A.

Subsequently to the printing of the text of the old kalendar just mentioned, I have, through the kindness of the Rev. T. Vere Bayne, the Keeper of the Archives, been given another opportunity of examining the MS. Although I was unfortunate in having a cloudy day for my inspection, I will offer such fragmentary notes as, with Mr. Madan's kind help, I am able to produce.

68. Jan. 6, 18, &c. The entries in small print 'Epiphania dni,' 'Sce Prisce v'gis,' &c., are insertions in a fifteenth-century hand.

Jan. 22. The interlined 'dirige' and 'missa' are in a fourteenth-century hand. [It is explained by the note cited in Mun. Acad. ii. 372. 'Missa pro anima Walteri Neel in die S. Vincentij martyris cum diacono et subdiacono; cum placebo, et dirige in vigilia.']

Jan. 24-26. The addition 'Et huic misse...' was probably made about 1525. At the foot of the January column I read further after 'diacono et subdiacono de...' and some such word as 'defunctis' (or 'requiem'), ... 'cum oracionibus Inclina, domine, Fidelium, quesumus, domine, animabus, Deus, qui caritatis dona, [Deus a quo].

These prayers were prescribed for the obit of Walter Neel and J. Shepey. See Mun. Acad. i. 168. They may be found in the Sarum Breviary (ii. 282) in Laudibus Mortuorum, (ii. 254) in suffragiis post Letaniam, with the exception of the second ('Fidelium,' &c.), which is perhaps intended for 'Miserere, quesumus, Domine, fidelium,' and is like the secreta oratio in the Mass Salus populi. See Missale Sarum, 742*, or 'Fidelium, Deus, omnium conditor et redemptor, animabus, &c., as in the Breviary, ii. 533, pro omnibus fidelibus defunctis.

69. Feb. 10. 'See Scolastice v'g Missa,' apparently added in the fourteenth century, at some date subsequent to the ordinance against the Burgesses in 1353.

Feb. 11. 'Obitus Eliz. nuper regine' in a hand of Henry VIIIth's time. Under Feb. 28, at the foot of the column, an entry is hopelessly obliterated.

70. March 7, 'scō † thome de aquino' added, and blotted.

March 17, 'pro henrico 4°.' written in the margin, against 'dirige.'

71. April 10. Cardinal Beaufort's benefaction of 500 marcs for the new Divinity Schools is mentioned in Mun. Acad. i. 333 (Mar. 5, 1448). He died April 11, 1447. There is an ordinance for the application of this legacy, ibid. ii. 567.

April 28. The note 'non d[is]' (which we print in small type) is a seventeenthcentury insertion.

72. May 1. The marginal note here (cited in our foot-note on p. 72) about the mass for Walter Grey was added about 1500. There is a note in this same MS. A., just after the kalendar, on If. 7. 'I Missa pro anima Walteri de Grey: In die sanctorum Philippi et Iacobi cum placebo et dirige in vigilia.' To which has been added in an old handwriting:—'Obitus de archiepiscopo W. de Grey, qui nobis contulit domos ante portam de Smythegate, pro quibus in anno prouidit vniuersitas pleno seruicio solempnia fore pro ipso.'

'Missa pro anniversar' Reginaldi sernientis quarto die post festum sancti Iohannis ante portam latinam [May 6-10] cum placebo et dirige.' Arch. A. lf. 7.

A. Wood has left a note (Life and Times, i. 431 a) to the effect that 'Walter Grey, abp. of York was owner of senerall tenements in Oxon, and that called Blackhall joyning on the west side to Hart hall he gave to the Universitie. He died on the day of S. Philip and James (1 May), on which day yearlie there was a solemne mass with a placebo and dirige celebrated for him by the Chancellor and Masters.' (Add. for Hist. Univ. Oxon., ed. Gutch, i. 232.) 'Great Black Hall was in Cat-street in St. Peter's-in-the-East parish, the N. W. corner of Hertford College, opposite Smith-gate. (Little Black hall was opposite Brasenose Gate, where the Radcliffe Camera now stands.) At one time Wood thought that Blackhall was given by Nic. Kyngham, bedel.' City of Oxford, i. 97; cf. i. 582, 596; iii. 272.

May 15. 'non le' is in a seventeenth-century hand, but 'Sce ffredeswyde' was a much earlier insertion.

May 26. Arch. A. (lf. 7) has a memorandum:-

'¶ Missa in die sancti Augustini pro magistro Gilberto de sancto Leofardo quondam [1288-1305] episcopo Cicestrie.'

73. Some entry has been erased at June 3rd and 4th.

June 15. 'Dirige' has been entered, with reference to J. de Langton. The note concerning his anniversary mass appears to be in writing of Henry VIIIth's time.

June 24. 'dirige,' mentioned in our foot-note on p. 73, was inserted about the year 1500.

June 25. An erasure appears after the name of St. Eloy. The notes 'non le,' &c., in the margin are in seventeenth-century writing. In Arch. A. (lf. 7) are notes:—

'Missa pro anima M^{el} Henr' de Herclay cum exequijs precedentibus. Nota. Et hoc specialiter a procuratoribus caueatur vt in omni missa communi dicantur iste communes collecte Deus, qui inter apostolicos, &c. [Brev. Sar. ii. 273] et Quesumus, Domine, pro tua pietate. [Missale, 875*] et Inclina, &c. [Brev. ii. 282] pro benefactoribus diners' cistarum' in an early hand. Then is added, 'Statutum factum apud Ebor' in tribus septimanis sancti Michaelis Anno regni regis Edwardi filij Edwardi xijo.' (October, 12 Ed. II., 1318.)

74. July 10. I think I can detect the words '... Missa die cessa[cionis de Spiritu Sancto] vt in fo. 43.'

July 28. Dedicacio ecclesie beate marie.

76. The fact that the column for the month of September (in vacation time, when no exequies were observed) has been left free from obliterations is noticeable. It goes to prove that the blots elsewhere were not the result of mere accident.

77. October 6. An obliterated entry baffles us. Some letters looking like 'füit ped' (? tempus) mesiü.' faintly appear.

Oct. 28. 'Sanctorum Simonis et Iude apostolorum.'

Oct. 30. 'dirige' inserted.

78. November 16, 17, 22, 23 and 25.

The notes here illegible were probably 'Missa: non le,' 'non le,' 'non le nisi fe,' 'Missa: non le,' and 'non dis.' The masses were for the brothers Cherleton, and for the Countess Ela Longespé, the younger, respectively.

79. The entry respecting St. Osmund must have been made subsequently to his canonization in January, 1457.

- 80-102 (even-numbered left-hand pages, from the Proctor's Book, Archiv. C.).
- 80. Jan. 13. For Walter Neel's obit there is an obliterated passage of which some words like the following are visible:—'Istis...diebus non fient d[isputaciones] cum... ordinarie vsitatis...fo. 21.'
- 82. Feb. 22. Arch. C. has also a note in the margin:—'Obijt dux Gloc' anno domini 14 xlvii [i. e. 1447]...lij.' The concluding word perhaps designates the place where he died in prison.

84. References to 'fo. 35 and 36,' 'fo. 38,' and 'fo. 118' are written against March 2nd, 12th, and 17th (the obits of Turville, Gildeford, and King Henry IV).

March 30. The word 'Scrutatoribus,' inserted here in a late sixteenth-century hand, does not really belong to that day, but is part of an unfinished registration of an election of proctors in 1502. The lower margin of Arch. A. was utilized for such purposes about 1588-1607.

86. At the foot of the April page in C. is a note:—Nota quod misa + pro henrico [Chichele archiepiscop fiat] die martis post initium termini . . .' The ordinance of May 24 and June 5, 1432, prescribed a mass preceded by exequiae mortuorum on the anniversary day of his death 'si commode fieri poterit, seu alio viciniore sequenti, saltem non legibili.' (Mun. Acad. i. 297-8.) Chichele's death occurred on April 12, 1443.

88. References to 'fo. 31 and 32,' 'fo. 22,' 'fo. 32,' and 'fo. 32' are entered in the margin of Arch. C. with reference to obits on May 6 (Selton), 10 (Reginald le bedel), 15 (Robery), and 26 (Leofard).

90. June 16. Langton's requiem. A reference given to 'fo. 36=42.'

June 20. 'Translatio S. Edwardi regis et martyris' a later entry, perhaps of the seventeenth century.

June 25. Hercley's name had been erased, and was subsequently restored. A reference is given to 'fo. 22 = 28.'

92. At July 5, a reference to 'fo. 20=26' for the 'Cessacio Trinitatis.'

100. There are several references in November, viz. to 'fo. 21 = 27,' 'fo. 130 et nota ibidem, 'fo. 21 = 27, 'fo. 22 = 28,' and 'fo. 21 = 27,' for Nov. 12 (Wa. Grey's obit), 13 (Danvers), 16 (K. Henry III), 20 (Charleton), and 29 (Q. Eleanor).

Nov. 23. I read in the margin, as to the Countess Ela's mass, 'cum sequencia et simbolo,' The Nicene Creed was recited at mass only on certain days, and not e.g. at capitular masses of the Departed. Ela's mass being a mass of the Holy Ghost had before the Gospel its sequence, ' Veni, Sancte Spiritus, et emitte celitus,' as in Sarum Missale, p. 744*; or else 'Sancti Spiritus assit nobis gratia' (as in Brev. Sarum ii. 504) which was properly the Whitsunday sequence (Missale, p. 426).

81. Jan. 5. 'Octa Scti Thomae' inserted by a seventeenth-century hand. At the foot of p. 81 is the name 'Jeukinus Vaughan Procurator,' written doubtless in 1614. 83. Feb. 7. The marginal note which we have printed at the foot of p. 83 is in a sixteenth-century hand.

89. May 15. For Rowbery's mass the reference 'fo. 62°' is added. And this I think may be the illegible reference at the end of our foot-notes to p. 89.

91. June 13. After 'Sci Antonij' is entered an astronomical symbol to indicate 'Sol in Cancro.'

95. August 6-7. The entries of the late fifteenth-century festivals of the Transfiguration and the Most Holy Name appear to me not to have been added here (in Arch. B.) until the seventeenth century. They do not appear at all in the earlier MSS. Arch. A. and C.

99. October 11. 'S. Edwardi regis' was originally written here, but for some reason has been erased. This was St. Edward the Martyr.

About Nov. 18, the Master Ri. Lichfild, mentioned in the note recorded at the foot of the October page (99 n.) was LL.D. and Archdeacon of Bath 1460, and Middlesex 1476, and was buried in St. Paul's in 1497.

- 101. November 8. 'Hoc die (1602) publica Academiae bibliotheca, a M⁷⁰ Bodleio restaurata, aperiebatur.' After this appears the obliteration of an early note, in which I detect the words '... a principio euangelij vsque [ad iii.] agnus dei.' This refers probably to the anniversary of Walter de Grey, Abp. of York (ob. 1255), who was commemorated in November as well as in May, the month in which he died. As to the rule against leaving the church before Agnus Dei was finished, see above pp. 68, 80 n.
- 108. At Peterhouse, MS. 1. 0. 7. contains Sophismata Gulielmi Heytesbury, a late fourteenth-century MS., beginning lf. 141 'Omnis homo est omnis homo.' At Corpus College, Cambridge, MS. Parker, 378, contains, on paper, in a fifteenth-century hand, Sophistria academie Cantabrigiensis. 'Proposicio est oracio indicatiua congrue et perfecte... descriptio est insufficiens.' (Then 'Benefundatum pre-exigit debitum,' four leaves. [By W. Chubbes, fell. of Pemb. Hall, first Master of Jesus Coll., Camb., 1497.] It is a logic primer, and was afterwards printed. See Dorne's Day Book, Oxford Hist. Soc. Collectanea, i. 149; ii. 456.)
 - 119. The Cisioianus and its variations.

To our specimens of Cisioianus variants we might have added:

(11) Cisio Ianus Epi super adde Ben. Hil. Fe. Mau. Marcel.

from a Durham kalendar, Brit. Mus. MS. Harl. 1804 (cir. 1400), which R. T. Hampson appends at the foot of an earlier Exeter kalendar, Medii Aevi Kalendarium, i. 449-60. 'Ben' is Benedict Biscop. Other saints noted and noticeable in this Durham kalendar are:—Guthlac and Wulfrid, April 11 and 24; Bedae commemoratio, May 27; William and Botnlph, June 8 and 17; Karilef and Bosili commemoratio, July 1 and 8. (The last line appended to July, p. 455, seems to belong more properly to June); Oswyn and Ebbe, August 20 and 25; Eustace, Edmund, and Hilda, Nov. 2, 16, and 17. (Hilarion, abb. Oct. 21, and Godric, erem. May 21, appear in the almanac, though not in the verses.)

in Bodl. Oxon. Digby MS. 29 (4) lf. 9, from the pen of Robert Stapulton.

The Cisio ianus, and its variations.—Mr. Bickley has very kindly sent us notes of six other MSS. in the British Museum, to be added to those described on pp. 137-47, 250-2.

Incipiunt Iulij pridie ydus caniculares.' A MS. treatise, sixteenth century, on paper in Parker MS. 169 (bound up with a copy of the 'Kalendar of Shephardes,' printed by W. Powell for J. Walley, 1559). The MS. occupies pp. 497-551, ending with thirty-six lines 'Impare par... Mobilis... coeuos. Christus factus homo lauat omnes redditu † tono.'

ELVEDON, Walter, of Gonville Hall, Cam. cir. 1330. At C. C. Coll. C. Parker MS. 37, a tall folio, is inscribed on If. 27 'Kalendarium Eluendene.' It contains also Theorica Campani de motibus planetarum. At If. 36 'Numerus est multitudo . . .' Lf. 37b, another kalendar. Lf. 46, 'Liber compoti. Aureus in Iano . . . Mobilis' ends If. 476. 'Mobilis ibo ciphos ace liber habeto coeuas †.' (I count here 367 verses.)

GROSSETESTE, Ro., Episcopus Lincolniensis, 1175-1253.

Parker MS. 439, is a small quarto, written in double columns. 'Capitulum i. De causa bisexti... Cap. xii. de aduentu et de temporibus quatuor iciuniorum. [C] ompotus est sciencia numeracionis.' (The treatise is mainly in prose, but it ends—) '... nos admonet, atque Matheus. Explicit compotus ecclesiasticus dñi robert grosseteste epî lincolniensis.' There is a circle and two leaves of kalendar computation.

In MS. Coll. Gonv. Cai. 141. The same treatise occupies leaves 57-92, and is inscribed 'Incipit compotus episcopi lincolniensis. Compotus est sciencia...' It is here preceded by 'Algorismus,' and followed by 'Compotus versificatus sub compendio.' 'Licet modo... quod queris semper haberi.'

Grosseteste's treatise De Sphaera has been printed, fo. Venice, 1508, p. 87 (Camb. Univ. Libr. 20. 9. 43). Also in the collection of tracts upon that subject, printed by L. A. Junta, fo. Venice, 1531-2, lf. 166-168^b. ('Intentio nostra...')

· KALENDARIUM:—Ars kalendarii. Trin. Coll. Cant. MS. R. 7. 23, fo. 231. 'Per veterum sagacitatem quia mira subtilitate planetarum cursum, et temporum considerabant distinctiones . . .' fo. 244 b.

(This variety of 'Cisioianus' ends on fo. 295,

It is found also in MS. Gonv. Cai. 137, p. 2, in the form

'Circumcisum † Adam focus Epiphania feretur Illarius fidis Fabianus gingitat (al. 'gignitur') Agnes Addo Vincenti dociat † Conuersio Pauli Brigida dauiticus eat vt Purgacio Matris,' &c.

J. Sacrobosco de Arte Numerandi, printed in Halliwell's Rara Mathematica, pp. 1-26, 'Omnia que a primena . . . De extractione radicum dicta sufficient,' has in its opening an echo from the Arithmetica of Boethins.

VILLA DEI, Alexander à, author of Doctrinale Puerorum, cir. A.D. 1209. His Massa Compoti was so called 'sicut de multis laminis aeris in conflatorio massa una efficitur.' See Bodl. MSS. 360, 11; massa, 360, 138; 361, 91°; 1285, 93^d; 1522, 187°; cf. 342, 149; 342, 151; 361, 91° (comment.); 1471, 83. MS. Bodl. Digby 28 (mentioned already, with others, on p. 147) is an early thirteenth-century MS. We may add to our list MS. Digby 22, fo. 25-41; and Digby 228, fo. 3^b-7, imperfect. Trin. Coll. Cam. MS. O. 5. 4, a large folio, contains (next after 'Algorismus') on fo. 281^b, Massa compoti 'Licet . . . codices . . . Auxiliante Deo paro tempora scribere metro . . . Aureus in Iano . . . f. 282. Sequitur inuencio anrei numeri. (f. 285) Mobilis ibo cifos a te liber habito cifos †. al. habeto coëuos.

Sillaba dat mensem prima, secunda diem. (gloss) Mobilis ibo: In istis versibus sunt septem dicciones...et ista sufficiant de massa compoti. Explicit massa compoti. (Then on column 2) Compotus manualis. Compotus iste diuiditur in .6. partes... Filius esto dei... (gloss) Isti versus deseruiunt... (end on fo. 287°, col. 1) Mar. ma. Iul. Oc. Senas, reliquis dabit minor unus... minor esto duabus. (gloss) Duo primi versus deseruiunt ad inneniendum quot nonas... docent quot dies habet quilibet mensis.' Then one and a quarter columns blank.

Besides MS. Gonv. Cai. 341, MS. 141 contains (next after the Computus of [Grosseteste, Bp. of] Lincoln), at lf. 93, 'Incipit compotus versificatus sub compendio. Licet modo in fine temporum plures constet habere codices... Aurens in Iano numerus ... (gloss) Hic ponit auctor modum formandi aureum numerum ... Qua mediante potest quod queris semper haberi. Explicit.' The total number of verses here is (I believe) 531. The gloss is written in the margin, besides which there are some interlinear glosses 1.

MS. Gonv. Cai. 341, § 12. 'Hic incipit massa compoti. Licet modo...codices (gl. i[d est] libros).... Iste versus consequitur (dicit) quotus est numerus aureus singulis annis per diuisionem annorum domini, Ignorans numerum, &c.... Anreus in Iano...' Here I count about 506 verses in the text. There is no 'Cisioianus.' Lf. 109, a kalendar in two columns.

MS. Gonv. Cai. 137, fo. 71. '(L)icet modo... Iste liber in prima sui diuisione...' (Imperfect; and the initials have not been put in by the rubricator.)

MS. Gonv. Cai. 385, p. 358. 'Licet modo...'; p. 359, 'Aureus in Iano...' On p. 363, diagram of a hand in the lower margin. Ends on p. 377 'Qua mediante potest quod queris + habere.' Explicit tractatus de tabulis. (I count here 512+4 lines.) The gloss extends only to p. 374. On pp. 378-9, a kalendar in three columns.

148. WIERAMMUS. De Beda excerptus de Computo liber. B. Pez. Dissert. isagog. ad Anecd. ii. p. xxvi. 'Quis primus inuenit menses . . .'

For our list of writings on the 'Computus' I may add from S. Ayscough's Catalogue of the Sloane MSS., &c. in the British Museum.

Sloane MS. 263, § 39. BAEDAE Versus de xii mensibus (? saec. xii).

Sloane MS. 3540. DIONYSIUS. Tres tabule super kalendarium.

Sloane MS. 263. HELPERICUS. De Compoto.

Sloane MS. 282. Kalendarium ad meridiem univ. Oxon., A.D. 1380.

Sloane MS. 407. W. Rede. Tabule, secundum meridiem Oxon., p. 38; cf. ibid., p. 33. Also in the same volume Tables by Alphonsus, Bedford, Bragus, Curtis, Faresby, Duke Humphrey of Gloucester, Kyllingworth, Randolph, &c. For Sloane MSS. 1620, 3024, see above, pp. 249, 250.

153. The Cambridge Computus Manualis. On p. 119 I have mentioned two MSS. 'in' or 'secundum vsum Cantabrig'. Of these Digby MS. 15, by a scribe named 'Bernys,' or Barnes, occupies eleven leaves. It begins like several others (see p. 139) 'Computus iste dividitur in sex partes.' The metrical portion begins 'Filius esto Dei' (cf. pp. 135, 161), and consists of about eighty lines, in about twenty sections, including a Cisioianus (no. 5, mentioned on pp. 118, 119). The other, in Digby MS. 81, occupies only six pages (lf. 8-10b) partly paper, partly vellum, and consists of only forty-four lines of verse, divided into twelve sections, with a prose gloss to each, from the pen of J. de Marisco (see p. 145). It begins

'Compotus iste dividitur in quinque partes, quarum prima docet inuenire festa immobilia:

Cisio ian. ed. Ephi. lucianus et hil. fe. man. mar. Sul.'

Later in the same volume (lf. 35) is 'Thome de Mercato commentarius super librum Dionysij Exigui de compoto ecclesiastico,' in which there are 358 lines, beginning 'Aureus in Iano numerus'; followed by fifty on the festivals; then Arbor numera-lis, beginning 'Phalerata granibus.' Then, another Cisioianus (lf. 65^b). Another similar collection is bound up at the end.

There was formerly bound up with certain tracts in the library of Peterhouse, Cambridge, and written (like the Digby MS. 81) on paper and vellum intermixed, e. g. De Sphera, Albumazar, Messehalla[th], and Iergis—as an ancient table of contents shows—a Computus Manualis secundum M[agistrum] T. de N[ouo] M[ercatu], in the volume now marked '2. 5. 1,' which was formerly the property of T. Deynman (al. Denham) medicus, Master of Peterhouse in 1500-16. I gather that the book was carried to the Deanery at Ely (like the old portrait of the Founder, Hugo de Balsham, Bp. of Ely) by Dr. Andrew Perne, who held the deanery with the mastership in 1557-89. The volume was subsequently restored: but the Cambridge Computus had been removed from it at an earlier date. Peterhouse has also lost a copy of Computus Ecclesiasticus Campani, lent in 1556 to Dr. Dee, the astrologer. It has found its way into the library of Samuel Pepys, now at Magdalen College, Cambridge.

156. The Rev. Andrew Clark, LL.D., has kindly sent me a description of a mid-fifteenth-century metrical kalendar, in seven-line stanzas, which he finds in the Godstow English Register, which he is editing for the Early English Text Society from Bodl. Rawl. MS. B. 408. It assigns not merely one syllable like the Cisioianus, but an entire line to each day in the year, as does e.g. the tenth-century Latin kalendar printed by Hampson (i. 397-420) from Athelstan's Psalter, MS. Cotton, Galba, A. 18. The Godstow kalendar has no Oxford peculiarities. Its most noticeable entry is a commemoration of St. Botulph in July. It begins 'O Jhesn, lorde, for the Circumsicyon,' and ends 'For seynt Silusster lone, at oure laste ende.' Cf. Wynken de Worde's Prymer, 4°. 1513. (Brit. Mus. C. 35. e. 7.)

164. In the Computus Manualis, lines 76, 76b, the Computus Manualis parvus, in the Sarum Manual of 1523, reads—

Libraque, Scorpio, Arcitenens, Capricornus et Urna, Quos tenet et Pisces: sita sunt hoc ordine signa.'

169. In Comp. Man., li. 130, the Sarum Manual reads 'Aureus hinc' for 'Aureus hic.' And in line 131, 'dud,' for 'duc.'

172. Before line 196 ('Primula G. Iani'), the Manual inserts a heading—

[¶ Pro clauibus.]

173. Between lines 230-1, the Sarum Manuale (1523) inserts a line—
'Sed cum predictis addes sanctos simul omnes'

(i.e. All Hallows' even).

Line 236, 'fercula' is the reading in Man. 1523, for 'escula' or 'excute.'

174. After line 244 of the Computus Manualis the Sarum Manual, 1523, adds a distich-

· I Pro solstitijs.

Hec duo solstitia faciunt: Cancer, Capricornus. Sed noctes equant Aries et Libra diebus.'

191. Dr. C. Horstman has printed, from a Durham MS. (now MS. Arundel 507), a less corrupt version of the lines de x. plagis Egipti.

'Prima rubens vnda: ranarum plaga secunda.

Inde culex tristis: post musca nociuior istis.

Quinta pecus strauit: vesicam sexta parauit.

Hinc sequitur grando: post brucus dente nephando

Nona tegit solem: primam necat vltima prolem.'

Library of Yorkshire Writers (Ri. Rolle, &c.), i. 428.

196. The Oxford Scholars' Petition for Cessation of Lectures, cir. 1220.

Ant. Wood's Latin translators make him say in Historia et Antiquitates, ii. 30, folio, 1674, that there was an inscriptio, or title, to the lines by Michael Blaunpayn, Cornubiensis, which proved that there were academical exercises performed at Oxford upon holy days. Wood's own book in English, ed. Gutch, II. ii. 817, 4°, 1792, expresses the same statement more fully, adding the words 'I have omitted ... the title going before them.' (See above, p. 196.) Mr. Madan assures me that the copy of Blaunpayn's lines used by Wood was certainly derived from Cotton MS. Vesp. 5, fo. 179b. Mr. Henry Littlehales, however, informs me that the manuscript itself prefixes no title at all to the verses. We can only suppose that Brian Twyne, transcribing from the MS. prefixed a descriptive title out of his own head, and that Wood naturally supposed that it was of the author's writing.

As, however, the MS. does contain several verses which Wood omits in his History, we have thought that a copy of the entire piece from the Cottonian MS. (transcribed for us by Miss Jessica Lewis) would be acceptable to our readers.

O doctrinis vir preclare, cuius sensus tanquam mare redundat in medium: Nihil posco singulare, sed adducor explicare voces vnus omnium. Omnes tue potestati sumus vltro subiugati, nec uerentes alium. Sed iam diu fatigati, non ualemus vltra pati scholas et ieiunium. Laborando ieiunare, ieiunando laborare, duplex est supplicium. Ista duo simul stare manum + nobis generare posset preiudicium. Equus diu stimulatus, aruis diu sinuatus, minus [habet] uirium. Ita diu fatigatus torpet sensus hebetatus, lentescit ingenium. Non est ergo rationis, quod iam dudum non imponis lectori silencium; Passos iugum Pharaonis festum resurreccionis inuitat et gaudium. Resurgentem nobis quare negaretur adorare Christum dei filium? Si uis pharaonizare, transituro rubrum mare patet exterminium. Et sit tuus grex securus, corpus christi suscepturus corpus tam eximium Ne quis tangat nisi purus, petat quisque consessurus 1 sacerdotem proprium. Visi fratres et sorores, parentesque cariores, et leta natalium, Sensus reddent forciores, quos et ipsum ad labores reparabit otium. [O]uid diffundor in sermones tot allegant + rationes pro pace scolarium. Vt suspendas lectiones, et ad tempus nobis dones quiescendi spacium. Ergo, cleri flos diuine, respirare parum sine, quos uexauit studium, Ne iam tue discipline nobis fiant displicine uergentes in tedium. Amen.

¹ J. de Burgo, Chancellor of Cambridge in 1385, says, 'Nota, secundum constitutionem ecclesie, quod omnis fidelis, tam vir quam mulier, postquam ad annos discretionis peruenerit, tenetur semel in anno omnia peccata sua confiteri proprio sacerdoti, et ad minus in paschate sumere eukaristie sacramentum nisi ob rationabilem causam de consilio proprij sacerdotis duxerit abstinendum . . . Extravag. De penilencia et remissione, ca. 'Omnis utriusque sexus' (Pupilla oculi, i. cap. 8). In 1378 the fourth constitution of Simon Sudbury prescribed shrift and housel at least thrice a year, viz. at Easter, Whitsuntide, and Christmas. This was a stricter rule than that of the twenty-first Canon of the fourth Lateran Council, under Innocent III in 1215, 'Omnis utriusque sexus.' On Ash Wednesday, 1443, Dr. J. Macworth, the Dean, sent an excuse to W. Alnwick, the Bishop of Lincoln, to the effect that he always went to his rectory at Tredyngton in the diocese of Worcester to hear his parishioners' consessions in Lent. Lincoln Statutes, ii. 459.

About the same period the Masters in the University of Paris (A.D. 1254) found it necessary to deal with a different complaint against certain lecturers among their own number, 'lectiones suas terminare festinantibus, antequam librorum quantitas requireret' (Bulaeus, Hist. Acad. Paris., iii. 280). In a more recent generation again the complaint was different. I recollect a couplet which was current in Oxford about thirty years ago, when certain teachers, being called upon to lecture by the public opinion of the day, were reported to have expressed their feelings as follows:—

'We don't want to teach—but, by jingo, if we do, We'll have a statutable class to give our lectures to.'
